WASHINGTON (AP) — The 93rd Congress, assured a niche in history as the Watergate Congress, went out of existence Friday night after passing a major foreign trade bill ranked top priority by President Ford.

The Senate adjourned at 2:39 p.m. PST, immediately following a report to President Ford by acting Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd and Republican Leader Hugh Scott that the work of the session was over, the House adjourned at 4:10 p.m. PST.

Both houses reconvene as the 94th Congress on Jan. 14.

In a statement coinciding with the adjournment, Ford said much had been accomplished but that the next Congress must face "the always unfinished agenda of our nation."

Just before leaving town, Congress sent to the White House a bill giving Ford broad authority to negotiate new international trade agreements. It contains an unprecedented provision aimed to promote freer emigration of Jews and other minorities from the Soviet Union.

The Senate passed the bill 72 to 4 after it was adopted by the House on a 323 to 36 vote.

In his statement, Ford commended Congress for action on measures dealing with trade reform, mass transit, pension reform, unemployment and energy.

He said, "The legislative accomplishments of the 93rd Congress have been less than I had hoped for, but perhaps that is a perspective of everyone at this end of Pennsylvania Avenue, and certainly this has been far from an ordinary session."

Amid the Watergate upheaval of the last two years, Congress forced former President Richard M. Nixon to resign under threat of impeachment. It installed two vice presidents. It also moved to reassert its powers in areas such as warrmaking and control of federal spending.

When the new Congress convenes next month, it will face major legislative tasks involving tax reform, national health care, energy and efforts to combat the recession.

Scott, R-Pa., said seven Senate Republicans, led by Sen. John G. Tower of Texas, would present an economie program to Ford today which GOP senators had agreed on earlier this week.

He said the recession is "the biggest of all domestic problems" and expressed hope that it could be eased without starting a new inflationary spiral.

Byrd said Friday that antirecession steps should be combined with "a tough, effective program to deal with the energy problem."

Both Houses waited until the final day to act on the foreign trade measure, which had been opposed by some members who feared it would export U.S. jobs overseas and do too much to benefit Communist countries.

Big Steel rejects Ford price rollback demand

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Saying the long-range solution to inflation "requires financially strong and profitable companies," United States Steel Corp. told the government Friday it has no intention of rolling back a new set of price increases.

The nation's No. 1 steel producer also said the price increase announced last Monday for about two thirds of its products amounted to an average 4.7 per cent, rather than the 8 per cent figure reported previously.

U.S. Steel Chairman E.B. Speer, justifying the higher prices in response to a rare presidential demand, said the new hike showed restraint since costs had risen $20 per ton between Sept. 1, 1974, and Jan. 1, 1975, while the price increase would give the company only an extra $15 per ton.

Speer and several deputies presented the U.S. Steel case to Albert Rees, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, in response to an unusually harsh demand by President Ford. The President earlier this week called the price hike "disappointing" and ordered Rees to get a written justification for it from the company.

The indirect confrontation between Ford and U.S. Steel revived memories of the President Kennedy's fight with the same company over a price hike more than a decade ago.

Kennedy, thinking he had successfully reached an agreement with U.S. Steel to prevent an increase at a time when the country was fighting off a recession, was shocked to learn one evening from then-board chairman Roger Blough the company was raising prices anyway.

In the long run, however, Kennedy won by getting the other four major steel makers not to raise their prices and forcing U.S. steel to roll back its increase.

The White House said earlier this week Ford wants the new increase by U.S. Steel to be rolled back.

Rees said after the meeting Friday, however, the company had "in part" justified a portion of its new price increase. He said the question of whether the entire boost could be backed up by higher costs was under study.

Asked if he intended to ask the industrial giant to roll back all or part of its price boost, Rees replied that "there's a possibility that the President may." He said Ford's decision would not be forthcoming until all the figures submitted by the company have been analyzed.

But Speer showed no indication of backing down, saying: "We're invoicing customers on the new price base."

Speer told the wage-price council, which serves as the government's watchdog on inflation, that U.S. steel is concerned about combatting the upward price spiral.

"But," he said, "we must also provide solutions to the longer range problems of curbing inflation, eliminating shortages, creating productive jobs and promoting economic growth and our standard of living."

Speer also said that the company was holding the line on prices for flat rolled steel, the type used most by the inflation-strapped automotive, appliance and housing industries.

300,000 auto workers idle Depression warnings at UAW

Combined News Services

DETROIT — United Auto Workers Vice President Ken Bannan warned Friday that auto industry layoffs, at the 300,000 mark on the eve of a 12-day Christmas holiday, could reach Depression Era levels in the coming months.

Bannan, who heads the union's Ford department, said the cutbacks in the face of a deepening sales slump already are the worst since the great depression of the 1930s. He appealed for help from Washington to ease the burden of laid-off workers and help automakers cut prices of their cars.

THE dire predictions from Bannan came as automakers prepared to shut down until Jan. 2 with 300,000 workers—40 per cent of the industry's blue collar work force—either idled already or facing layoffs in the first three months of 1975.

"We're no longer in a recession in the auto industry," Bannan said. "We're in a depression for the workers and it's not going to get much better."

A Chrysler Corp. spokesman said the No. 3 automaker would not detail its January production schedules until Jan. 2. The company currently has 64,600 workers on short and long-term layoffs and five of its six U.S. assembly plants closed from Thanksgiving to Jan. 6.

Chrysler already has confirmed that one assembly plant, at Newark, Del., will remain closed until Feb. 3. Industry sources said at least two more—Hamtramck, Mich., and Jefferson Avenue in Detroit—also may stay closed.

General Motors has already announced layoff plans affecting 132,000 workers in the first quarter of 1975, Ford Motor Co. 91,000 and American Motors 15,100.

Bannan said there was great apprehension among the more than 400,000 workers still on the job, wondering when they might get cut from payrolls.

MEANWHILE American workers were caught in a vicious whipsaw of rising prices and falling purchasing power in November, government figures showed Friday.

The Labor Department said consumer prices rose in November by nine-tenths of 1 per cent, the same as in October. It said the 12-month increase in the cost of living was 12.1 per cent.

Workers' real weekly earnings, on the other hand, fell 1.8 per cent during the month, and were

Ford plans to oust chairman of CAB

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford announced Friday he will not reappoint Robert D. Timm as chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board. The decision was prompted by allegations that Timm was too close to the industry the CAB regulates.

Ford said that when Timm's term as chairman expires on Dec. 31, Richard J. O'Melia will serve as acting chairman until he names a new member and chairman next year.

Timm's term as CAB member expires in December 1976. O'Melia's term runs until 1980.

Ford also said he was signing an executive order permitting Whitney Gilliland to continue serving as a board member after he reaches age 70 on Jan. 3.

Under the order, Gilliland can continue to serve through next June 30.

Ford said he will nominate a successor to Gilliland after Congress reconvenes next year and that the person he chooses will be nominated to be CAB chairman succeeding Timm.

Timm had been under increasing fire in recent months because of a golfing weekend he took with the chairman of a corporation that had business pending before the CAB.

His wife of 26 years, Mildred, was in the room, they said, and ran to the home of a neighbor, who called police.

Nixon attorneys attack tape law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorneys for Richard M. Nixon Friday attacked the constitutionality of the new law that gives the government custody of the former President's tapes and papers.

They did not press their petition, however, upon being assured by Judge Charles R. Richey at a hearing in U.S. District Court that his temporary restraining order over the materials would remain in effect.

"I don't think you have anything to worry about, nor does your client, until I decide the question of ownership," Richey told Herbert Miller Jr., Nixon's attorney in the case. "... What the court will be appealed to higher courts."

Nixon's lawyers went into court less than 24 hours after President Ford signed the bill which nullifies an agreement worked out between Ford and Nixon under which Nixon would have been the final custodian of the documents.

"This incredible piece of legislation is clearly in violation of the constitutionally recognized separation of powers," Miller argued. He said it also was an unconstitutional seizure of property.

But the judge remarked that the new law did not deal with the question of ownership and said that if the courts finally determined that Nixon owned the materials, "then I must hold a hearing to determine how much they are worth to him and his heirs."

Miller's petition cited history in support of the claim that the documents and tapes belong to Nixon "as has been the case with every president of the United States.

The judge's restraining order requires the government to hold onto the materials, although Nixon may have access to them "for the sole purpose of preparing to testify in the Watergate criminal trial." That trial will end without Nixon's testimony.

Richey retains authority to release any of the material subpoenaed in connection with other Watergate-related court proceedings.

Strikers cross own picket line for bonuses

By LINDA ZINK Staff Writer

Striking workers at Robertshaw Controls Co. in Long Beach crossed their own picket line Friday long enough to pick up their last paychecks and a special holiday bonus from the company.

The strike notwithstanding, management honored a 30-year tradition and presented all employees — including those who hit the bricks

Monday — with 12-pound turkeys.

"It's a tradition with us," said a spokesman for the company. "The final paychecks were available today and so were the turkeys."

Frances Stefani, strike coordinator for United Auto Workers Local 805, said there was some confusion among the plants 800 striking employees as to whether to accept the Christmas bonuses.

Mrs. Stefani explained that while there seemed to be no strings attached to the offer, some members of the local refused their turkeys.

"But we told our people to go ahead and accept. They've paid for them throughout the year...and probably will continue to pay for them in terms of the limit management wants to place on cost of living increases."

Meanwhile — and despite the turkeys — union members continued to man picket lines that were set up Monday after negotiations broke down over what a union spokesman termed management's insistence on placing a limit on cost of living increases.

According to Ernie Johnson, Local 805 president, other key issues in the negotiations, which began Oct. 17, include greater company participation in both health insurance premiums and the pension plan.

The strike by the plant's 800 assembly line production workers is the first in 29 years.

Through Wednesday, massive picketing at the company's 100 Victory Way plant prevented most nonunion personnel from entering the building.

A temporary restraining order, issued Wednesday by Superior Court Judge Campbell M. Lucas, limited picketing to two persons per gate. A later agreement between attorneys for the company and the union set the number of pickets at three per gate.

The union will appear before Lucas Dec. 30 to show cause why more than this number is necessary to the strike.

A meeting has also been called by the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service Monday. Representatives of both labor and management say they will attend.

Snow whitens Iowa, Illinois

Combined News Services

A snow storm narrowed up to six inches of snow on a narrow band of western and central Iowa Friday and moved eastward into Illinois. Light snowfalls brushed parts of Vermont, New York, Wisconsin and South Dakota. The Iowa Highway Patrol said numerous cars slid off icy roads into ditches along Interstate 80 between Grinnell and Stuart, and along Interstate 35 between Story City and the Missouri border. No serious injuries were reported. In Des Moines, Iowa, footprints in the snow helped Polk County sheriff's deputies arrest two suspects in a tavern break-in. The deputies tramped through the snow for two miles and found the suspects hiding in a ditch. The storm, on the next to last day of autumn, was expected to collide with a separate weather system along the East Coast, and there were predictions of a major winter storm in Maryland and Virginia.

Boston antibusing plot

BOSTON — FBI officials here refused on Friday to confirm or deny reports of an alleged plot by opponents of forced school busing to blow up three bridges serving areas to be desegregated. Police also had no comment on the reports that federal authorities here apparently headed off such a plot after investigators, acting on an informant's tip, questioned eight suspects. The reports in the Los Angeles Times and the Boston Globe said the bridges were kept under surveillance for several days while the suspects were interrogated. The Globe quoted sources as saying the alleged plan was intended to isolate East Boston, a section of the city expected to be included in school busing plans for next September. The only access to East Boston besides the Tobin and Meridian bridges is through the Summer and Callahan tunnels under Boston Harbor.

Make-believe flight

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Johnson Space Center officials said they were well pleased with the first space-flight simulation Friday between the center and a Soviet space-flight control center. "It went as well or better than I expected," said Pete Frank, American flight director for the Apollo-Soyuz Test Project (ASTP), the first space mission involving the two countries. The actual mission is set for next July 15. The make-believe flight was unique in that it was the first time the Johnson Mission Control Center had worked with another space-flight control center and a different set of communications. The communications from Johnson to the Russian control center 40 miles north of Moscow go by land lines from Greenbelt, Md., to New York, then up to a satellite, down to land lines in Europe then onto the Russian center. Nine commercial lines are used.

Newspaper strike ends

CLEVELAND, Ohio — Members of the Cleveland Newspaper Guild's Plain Dealer unit voted Friday afternoon to accept the publishers' latest contract offer and end a strike that started Nov. 1. A guild spokesman said the vote by secret ballot was 108 to 94. Guild members of the competing Cleveland Press are to vote on an identical contract today. Several Plain Dealer workers returned to their jobs immediately after the vote and began preparing Sunday editions. The cost-of-living factor in the company offer was reportedly improved but the rest of it was the same package rejected by a voice vote just before the strike started and again last Saturday. It boosts the current $300 weekly top minimum pay for newsmen an average of $57 over the three years.

Golan seen as key to peace

TEL AVIV — Former Defense Minister Moshe Dayan said Israel would have to give the Golan Heights back to Syria if it wanted to avoid another war and reach a peace settlement with Egypt. He spoke only hours after Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin challenged Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to a face-to-face meeting to discuss prospects for peace in the Middle East. "If Egypt is not willing to make a separate settlement then not even the most tempting proposals will do any good unless we include a settlement with Syria on the Golan Heights," Dayan said in an interview on the national television. Asked if war was inevitable under existing conditions in the region, Dayan said: "If, and as long as, we are sitting on the Golan Heights, then the dagger of war exists above our heads. It is not only an open wound that cannot heal, the Golan Heights is the key to the problem of war." Dayan said he didn't feel a partial pullback would be adequate. Israel captured the Golan Heights from Syria in the 1967 Middle East war. Since then, it has established 17 civilian settlements in the region.

Socialist blueprint

ADDIS ABABA — Ethiopia's military rulers Friday announced a sweeping Socialist blueprint for the future which will include a one-party state, government control of vital industries and the organization of peasants into collective farms. A statement on Radio Ethiopia said the "Ethiopian Socialism" program was designed to replace the now-discredited rule of Emperor Haile Selassie and haul the largely backward East African nation into the 20th century. The military's sharp political turn to the left, following centuries of feudal and imperial rule, came less than a month after the government ordered the execution of 59 of the most powerful Ethiopian landowners and politicians. Haile-Selassie remained in military detention.

Pretruce bombings

BELFAST — Four bomb blasts rocked downtown Belfast Friday night even as residents were celebrating the announcement of a Christmas truce by the Provisional wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army. A fifth bomb damaged the center of the provincial town of Dungannon, but security officials said nobody was injured in any of the blasts.

Assassin hanged

SEOUL — Korean authorities Friday hanged Moon Se-kwang, convicted assassin of the wife of President Park Chung-hee, but they declined to say when and to whom his body will be turned over. Officials who witnessed the execution said Moon, 23, wept and prayed for 20 minutes before the hanging in Seoul prison. Moon did not know he was about to be executed when he was taken to the hanging room of the prison, the officials said.

People in the news

Cheerful Rocky gets to work as VP

Combined News Services

Nelson A. Rockefeller, five minutes late for work on his first day as the nation's 41st vice president, pledged on Friday to be "as quiet and as helpful as possible to President Ford."

Heavy traffic outside his Foxhall Road home prevented Rockefeller from being on hand to preside over the Senate when it convened at 9 a.m. for the final day of the 93rd Congress.

He arrived at 9:05, having missed the opening prayer, and remained a half-hour while acting Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd and Republican Leader Hugh Scott discussed the accomplishments of the session.

Then, after visiting his new offices and talking with reporters, Rockefeller returned to New York with his wife, Happy, after a visit of less than 24 hours during which he was confirmed and inaugurated as the new vice president.

His duties as the Senate's presiding officer are Rockefeller's only constitutional responsibilities. Ford is expected to assign him to a variety of chores, including a major role in planning the administration's domestic policies.

The President and his new vice president will discuss Rockefeller's role at a White House meeting this afternoon, aides said.

With Ford scheduled to leave Sunday for a ski vacation in Vail, Colo., Congress quitting until Jan. 14 and Rockefeller scheduled to go to Puerto Rico the week after Christmas, it will take a while for the new vice president to be fully installed and at work on his new job.

He made it clear, however, in talking with reporters that he plans to keep a low profile while guarding against upstaging the President.

"I want to be as quiet and as helpful and only do that which is appropriate and useful to the President and to the people of this country," he said.

He said he was very pleased that the four-month wait from nomination to confirmation was over and noted that Thursday night's 237-128 House margin was "better than any vote I got" in winning four terms as governor of New York.

Asked whether he considers inflation or recession the nation's No. 1 problem now, Rockefeller said he considers them interrelated. "I'm going to find out from the President how I can be helpful to him in his handling of these problems with the Congress of the United States," he added.

Asked if he had any specific ideas for dealing with the nation's current economic woes, he replied no.

Hot pursuit

A pack of hounds was in hot pursuit of the fox, followed by the hunters on horseback, when they crossed a highway — and that's where the federal judge's wife allegedly got in trouble.

Nancy Penn Smith Hannum, 53, the first woman in America to become a master of foxhounds, reportedly bumped into a Pennsylvania state trooper last weekend while he was "processing a traffic violation."

Mrs. Hannum, 53, whose husband, John, is a member of the U.S. District Court of Eastern Pennsylvania, was charged with assaulting a police officer.

"Ridiculous," she retorted.

Trooper John Pflanz, treated for a knee injury after last Saturday's incident in the suburban Philadelphia town of Unionville in Chester County, was recuperating at his home Friday and was unavailable for comment.

The complaint against Mrs. Hannum, considered one of Philadelphia's top horsewomen, was filed with a district justice.

As far as anyone knows, the fox got away.

Unsolved

Horner Bowles of Hillsdale, Mich., went to his first township meeting Thursday night to find out how to get rid of his garbage. He didn't get an answer but he did get elected township treasurer.

Bowles showed up as the Somerset Township board was discussing the need for electing a successor for the resigned treasurer before the township's 4,400 tax bills, could be mailed. A board member saw Bowles and nominated him. He was quickly elected to the $3,500-a-year job.

"I only came down to see about some garbage," said Bowles, explaining he wanted township dumps to be open more often.

"I still haven't got rid of my garbage," he added. "It is in my station wagon."

Long sentence

Sanford K. Bronstein was sentenced Friday in Miami to 25 years in prison for stealing $800,000 from Cedars of Lebanon hospital when he was president of the Miami institution.

The sentence was imposed by Circuit Court Judge Sidney Weaver who also gave Bronstein probation.

Last January, Bronstein shared a speaker's platform with former President Richard M. Nixon at ceremonies dedicating a new hospital wing.

Noting that Bronstein fled the country during investigation of the missing hospital funds, Weaver ordered him to the Dade County jail without bond pending appeal.

No visitors

The jailers of Rudolf Hess, once deputy leader of the Nazi Third Reich and now the only inmate in Spandau war crimes prison, have turned down a request from his wife for a private Christmas meeting, Hess' son said Friday in Berlin.

Hess, 80, has been in captivity for the past 33 years since making his "mad flight" to England in an effort to get the British out of World War II. An international military tribunal sentenced him to life imprisonment.

Fanne

Stripper Fanne Foxe straddled innocent Friday in Sanford, Fla., to indecent exposure charges.

Miss Foxe, a friend of Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., was not present for the arraignment hearing before Seminole County Judge Robert Hall. Her attorney entered the innocent plea in writing.

Miss Foxe and night club owner Mike Pinter were arrested Dec. 12 at Pinter's Club Juana in Casselberry. Miss Foxe was charged with indecent exposure and Pinter with promoting indecent exposure.

Legislator

James A. "Sloppy" Floyd, the scrappy north Georgia man who ruled the House Appropriations Committee with wit and candor, died of an apparent heart attack Friday in Atlanta.

The 54-year-old Trion Democrat was found dead in his bed at the American Motel.

Operation

Sen. Henry M. Jackson was in "very good condition" Friday following a six-hour operation to remove a kidney stone, his physician said in Tacoma, Wash. Part of the affected kidney was also removed. Dr. Anthony Borski said the effect of the removal on Jackson, considered a contender for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1976, would be minimal. But Jackson will be hospitalized eight to 10 days rather than the scheduled two days because of the removal of part of the kidney.

Not responsible for staff, declares Ward

Our L. A. Bureau

Supervisor Baxter Ward, who in past years has criticized numerous department heads for their lack of control of hundreds of employees, confessed Friday he could not maintain responsibility over his own staff of 30 or so employees.

The confession came as Ward sought to defend himself and his office over disclosures that one of his deputies had requested a Ward commission appointee to get credit and income tax information on certain county officials.

The situation developed after Simon Zervos announced he was quitting two county commissions because of what he termed "unethical and perhaps illegal" investigative activities of Ward and his staff.

Zervos released letters written by Ward Deputy Carol Schweitzer in which she asked if Zervos could help to get "income tax info" on retired Supervisor Ernest Debs.

The letters also asked Zervos to see what he could find out about the background of former Assistant Sheriff Howard Earle, who was forced to resign in 1973.

Additionally Mrs. Schweitzer in the letter asked Zervos if he could run credit checks on Hugh Dynes, chief deputy to Supervisor Pete Schabrum, members of Dynes' family and Warren Schmuki, another Schabrum deputy.

IN THE letter, Mrs. Schweitzer said she wanted the information on Debs because "we are having a tough time nailing him on anything specific though his hand is in everything and this (income tax information) may be the place to start.

The letter said, "Wish I had hand delivered this myself" and a postscript said, "Incidentally, didn't want to put this on county stationery."

Ward, at a press conference Friday, said Mrs. Schweitzer had acted in violation of office policy and without his knowledge.

"Everyone on my staff is aware we just don't do things this way. It is wrong and had I known of it I would not have allowed it," Ward said.

Now that I know of it I intend to put a stop to it on any occasion that I can possibly control.

Ward said he would rebuke Mrs. Schweitzer for her conduct. He said she was not available for comment because she was away on vacation.

WARD insisted he did not know what Mrs. Schweitzer meant by the phrase, "We want to nail Debs."

Ward denied repeatedly that he had any knowledge of requests to gather information on the two officials.

Zervos also claimed that Ward's campaign accepted more money from individuals than the $45 limit which Ward claimed publicly was all he would take from individuals.

Zervos said he had checks for various amounts of money above the $45 limit made out to Ward campaign committees.

Additionally, Zervos said, he personally wrote two checks totaling $180 for Ward's campaign for governor.

6 counties agree on smog plan

Our L.A. Bureau

Supervisors from five counties neighboring Los Angeles County reached a tentative agreement Friday to form a unified smog control district.

The two-hour session dealt with a proposal aimed at locking proposed state legislation calling for a mandated air pollution control regional district in the six-county area.

Friday's meeting dealt basically with representation on the unified district.

Legislation passed last year, but vetoed by Gov. Reagan, had called for a regional district under which Los Angeles County would have had only a 30 per cent representation while contributing 70 per cent of the finances.

As result of Friday's discussion there was agreement that Los Angeles County, with 72 per cent of the population in the six-county area, would have at least 50 per cent of the voting power.

Under the tentative agreement, it was decided the unified district would be operated by a board of seven supervisors — two from Los Angeles County with six votes; one from Orange County with three votes; and one supervisor each from Riverside, Ventura, Santa Barbara and San Bernardino with one vote.

More details are still to be worked out, but Supervisor Pete Schabrum said after the meeting he was "optimistic" that the unified district would become a reality in the South Coast Air Basin.

The Board of Supervisors in each of the six counties would have to ratify the agreement before the unified district could be set up.

Collection

In May 1971 I purchased a used car from a dealer who is no longer in business. I made a down payment of $100 and paid $35 a week for three weeks. However, the car was in such poor condition that I returned the car to the dealer and told him to keep the money I had paid him. He agreed to take the car back and clear the account. Now J.J. Cimino Collections, 705 S. Long Beach Blvd., Compton, claims that I owe $418 for the car. I don't think I should have to pay for a car which I never owned. Could Action Line please help me clear my account? M.P., Long Beach.

Action Line put you in contact with the collection agency and your account has been cleared after you agreed to a compromise payment of $100. The agency noted you had no documented proof that you actually returned the car to the dealer.

Appeal

In September 1973 my son began drawing monthly disability benefits because he suffers from a severe asthmatic problem and is unable to work. His checks came regularly then stopped abruptly. The Social Security Administration told us that he doesn't need their help now. Our doctor has written them that my son is ill but it did no good. Can you help? Mrs. C.V., South Gate.

Your recourse is to file a totally new application for your son, according to a Huntington Park Social Security spokesman. Social Security stopped your son's benefits after a panel of their doctors ruled he was able to work. Although you didn't appeal their decision in the allotted 30 days, you may still be able to appeal if you can convince Social Security that you had a good reason for not doing so within that time.

REACTION

I asked you for help because my barbershop lease at the Sheraton Inn at Los Angeles Airport is being canceled and I stand to lose most of the $5,000 it cost me to buy the business initially. All you did was contact the hotel manager. I could have told you what he would say before you did it. I dispute his contentions. Friends of mine who read the item can only believe that I'm an undesirable tenant, as stated in your answer and that I even allow gambling on the premises. These things are not true. My only guess for the reason I am being forced out is that they have a profit motive. I think you should print my side of the story. J.G., Torrance.

'Something unhealthy' going on in FDA building

WASHINGTON (AP) — What is it at the Food and Drug Administration that's making people sick?

Since July, some employees in a laboratory area of an old six-story building occupied by the FDA have been complaining of headaches, nausea, sore throats, coughing, drowsiness, choking sensations, shortness of breath and chest pressure.

The agency is charged with protecting consumer health.

One or two employees have resigned. Others have taken sick leave. More than 20 have been sent to a Public Health Service outpatient clinic. But nobody has been able to say what's wrong.

And in the absence of more severe symptoms, the Public Health Service has declined an FDA request that it conduct full physical examinations.

"This is more than just a strange experience," says Gerald F. Meyer, FDA associate commissioner for administration. "It's an extremely perplexing problem. It concerns us very much. But there's no question we haven't solved it."

Neither has the government solved a similar mystery in Dallas, where a government building harbors a fungus, its cause unidentified. Since January, the fungus has produced three confirmed cases of noncontagious hypersensitive pneumonitis — and possible symptoms in 800 other employees.

Here, employees suspect bromine gas, carbon monoxide or carbon tetrachloride.

But Meyer says repeated air samples taken by the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health have turned up nothing toxic.

One possibility, Meyer says, might be allergy caused by test animals.

Another, says FDA Commissioner Alexander

M. Schmidt, "is that the whole thing might be a rare case of mass hysteria." But Schmidt calls that "the possibility of last resort."

Meanwhile, the FDA is trying to move employees with the mysterious symptoms to other work areas.

"If the federal government found these conditions in a nongovernment facility," says one employee, "it would force rectification of the situation — or else."

IUD 'at worst' held better than pill

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a major policy reversal affecting millions of women around the world, the Food and Drug Administration announced Friday that it is lifting the six-month-old ban on the Dalkon Shield intrauterine contraceptive device (IUD).

But the FDA announced it is imposing new sales restrictions on the Dalkon Shield.

FDA Commissioner Alexander Schmidt said the A.H. Robins Co. of Richmond, Va., has agreed to limit future distribution only to doctors who will register new patients at the time shields are inserted and report complications.

In this way, Schmidt said, the FDA will be able to determine whether the Dalkon Shield causes more deaths and injuries than other IUDs.

"At its worst," the commissioner said, "the Dalkon Shield still is generally safer than the pill."

The Planned Parenthood Federation of America, meanwhile, announced that it will continue its ban on use of the shield.

The Robins firm suspended sales and distribution of the Dalkon Shield last June after reports of adverse reactions mounted.

The FDA said it had reports of 14 deaths and, as of last Oct. 25, 219 cases of infected abortions among women who became pregnant despite wearing Dalkon Shields.

In trial of Nixon aides

Defense calls tapes 'family discussions'

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Watergate prosecution charged Friday that former President Richard M. Nixon's taped Watergate discussions had desecrated the White House of Jefferson, Jackson and Lincoln. But a defense lawyer said the tapes were merely "family discussions."

Chief prosecutor James F. Neal completed a fervent 3-hour, 56-minute summation of the conspiracy case against five of Nixon's former aides. John J. Wilson, a lawyer for 52 years and counsel for former White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman, followed him with 2 hours, 35 minutes of low-key argument.

Defense lawyers estimated that 10 hours of final arguments remained, indicating that the cover-up trial may have to continue both Monday and Christmas Eve in order for Judge John J. Sirica to give his charge to the jury Thursday as planned.

NEAL CITED the White House of "such giants as Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, the two Roosevelts, Eisenhower, Kennedy" and asked whether they would have made such remarks as Nixon and his aides made, as revealed by the tapes.

But Wilson, defending Nixon as much as Haldeman, asked the jury of eight blacks and four whites to consider the tapes — many of them made as the Watergate cover-up began to unravel in March and April 1973 — as "family discussions."

"You all have families and you all have had tragedies. These are family meetings. Here is very frank talk," Wilson said. He added that he himself has, sometimes suggested, in a short temper, "shoot that guy!"

"Of course I didn't mean that," Wilson said. He asked the jury to judge the tapes as "that kind of human conduct..." and accused Neal of interpreting "every jot and tittle (of the tapes) as being conspiratorial."

"THIS IS human intercourse," Wilson said. "This is the way humans deal with each other."

Neal and Wilson also clashed on the significance of the March 21, 1973, tape, on which former White House Counsel John W. Dean III warned Nixon of a "growing cancer on the presidency" in laying out the story of Watergate.

Neal charged that Nixon quickly responded with a suggestion that money demands of the original defendants be met to buy time. Wilson argued that the meeting was "the springboard by which the President became very concerned about what had been going on."

Wilson also denied that Haldeman sought to obstruct justice by suggesting that the CIA contact the FBI on the progress of the investigation into four Mexican checks used to help finance the break-in. He said Haldeman merely sought to avoid the "political embarrassment" of the exposure of a campaign contribution from a supporter of Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn.

THE PROSECUTOR'S concluding style stood in sharp contrast to the first four hours of his summation Friday. Neal began with fervor — gesturing, striding in front of the lectern, raising his voice. His Tennessee drawl showing, frequently he shouted "Why? Why?"

But at the end, he quietly told the jury:

"Finally, uniquely I suppose in the history of litigation, you have heard the voices on tape of three of these defendants."

"You have heard them talk as the cover-up begins to crumble in March and April of 1973. You've heard them scramble for position and develop 'lines' and 'scenarios.'"

Members of the jury, tragically these conspiratorial conversations have happened in the hallowed halls of the White House — where once strode such giants as Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, the two Roosevelts, Eisenhower, Kennedy.

"CAN YOU compare the White House, perhaps when Jefferson was drafting his 2nd Inaugural, or Lincoln writing 'with malice towards none and charity for all,' with the tapes you've heard in this courtroom? Roosevelt saying 'we have nothing to fear but fear itself,' with the statement 'give them a hors d'oeuvre and maybe they won't come back for the main dish.'"

Nixon was the author of the "hors d'oeuvre" statement. With the jury out of the room, defense attorney William S. Frates moved for a mistrial on grounds of laughter in the courtroom. Frates represents John D. Ehrlichman, the former White House domestic affairs chief.

Wilson also arose to say there had been "aspects of the French Revolution in the courtroom 'this morning.'"

Sirica disagreed with Wilson and denied Frates' motion. But the judge warned that persons who laughed would be escorted out of the courtroom by a marshal and might be jailed for 10 days for contempt.

Neal worked his way chronologically through the whole planning and execution of the June 17, 1972, break-in at the Democratic national offices in the Watergate complex and the subsequent cover-up of high-level involvement in the affair.

He said the cover-up had involved the payment of $429,500 — not for "humanitarian and charitable" purposes, but to keep the burglars quiet — and attempts to mislead the FBI and CIA.

Neal said that when Dean went to Nixon on March 21, 1973, with the full story of Watergate and warned of a "growing cancer on the presidency," Nixon suggested "eight...ten...twelve times" that money ought to be raised to meet the burglars' demands while other options were considered.

"Suddenly, good John Dean became mean John Dean," Neal said.

When Wilson rose to sum up Haldeman's defense, the first person he blamed for Watergate was Dean.

"John Dean has a mastermind of chicanery, of monkey business, of flouting the law, of having no conscience," Wilson said. "Not only was he a participant in obstruction of justice but he's an embezzler... he's a liar... he's a perjurer.

Wilson spoke for 35 minutes without once touching on facts or evidence in the case — concentrating on abstract principles of law and admonishing the jurors to find each defendant innocent unless they are convinced of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.

Liar pal of Agnew sentenced

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Commenting that only a "unique situation" kept former Vice President Spiro Agnew out of prison, a federal judge Friday gave a six-month jail term to an engineer who admitted paying several thousand dollars in kickbacks to Agnew.

In addition to the jail term, Chief U.S. District Court Judge Edward Northrop ordered 18 months probation and a $5,000 fine for Eugene Hsi, 50, who was accused of lying to a grand jury investigating political corruption.

Hsi said he lied even though the grand jury was investigating Agnew's Democratic successor as Baltimore County Executive, N. Dale Anderson, because "I knew it was going to lead to Mr. Agnew."

"In June, 1973 when I lied, he was my political idol," Hsi said. "He was vice president of the United States."

In explaining his reasons for the jail term, Northrop said although Hsi subsequently agreed to cooperate in the Agnew investigation, "it should be pointed out that Maryland has been the subject of some shame as a result of the vice president and corruption that has been going on for some time."

Dealers await big 'gold rush'

LONDON (AP) — European dealers are preparing for the century's biggest gold rush after Jan. 1 when Americans will be legally permitted to trade in the precious metal for the first time in 41 years. They expect a bonanza.

But uncertainty over the size of the demand has kept the world's two biggest gold markets in London and Zurich in jitters, influenced by any rumor that seems to have some bearing.

Prices firmed up Friday after France announced it would raise the valuation on its gold reserves from the official price of $42.22 an ounce to the market price, which closed at $188 in London, up $1.75.

This was in line with an agreement between President Ford and French President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing that governments should be able to revalue their gold holdings if they wish, so as to improve their credit ratings and make it easier to pay for oil.

The Shah of Iran warned that such revaluations would harm the purchasing power of oil producing countries and that they would retaliate with still higher oil prices.

Finance Minister Jean-Pierre Fourcade, who announced the French decision in Paris, called the Shah's reaction "interesting" and predicted that revaluation of gold will be widespread within two years.

One thing appears to be a sure thing for dealers here: The expected American demand will have to be satisfied by the U.S. Treasury or by South Africa and the Soviet Union, the two biggest gold producers.

SUPPLY HAS BEEN so short that the price soared from $67.50 an ounce last Jan. 2 to a record $191 here and $192 in Zurich Nov. 18. Since then, the price has been running between $180 and $189 an ounce.

The U.S. Treasury will auction two million ounces of gold Jan. 6, but that is likely to be only a drop in the bucket. Estimates of the U.S. demand range from a low of about 12 million ounces for all of 1975 to 25 million ounces in the first spurt of trading.

A U.S. Treasury Department official said in Washington that foreign governments will be banned from buying gold at the Jan. 6 auction because the U.S. considers an international prohibition against government purchases of gold at prices above official prices still to be in effect. The French-American agreement this week covers only gold already held by governments, not purchases.

Some dealers in Europe believe many Americans have been illicit owners of gold for years, keeping it stashed away in European bank vaults. Long-time holders could have paid as little as $36 an ounce and would reap handsome profits by selling now. But many dealers say there is no reason to sell quickly after so many years when the price may soon rise in between $200 and $300 an ounce.

A major question is whether South African and Soviet producers will continue sending most of their production for sale to London and Zurich or make direct shipments to U.S. dealers.

South Africa now is selling about 80 per cent of new production in Zurich and 20 per cent in London. The Soviet Union sells mainly through Zurich but this year, according to U.S. Commerce Department figures, the Soviet have sold 545,000 ounces to the U.S.

THE SOUTH AFRICANS have said they will ship to the U.S. their one-ounce Kruggerand gold coins that have been fast sellers in Europe. In London, the Model Cornelia Sharpe displays two one-ounce bars of 14-karat gold being sold as pendants by a New York firm—at $199 each.

—AP Wirephoto

Kruggerands command $220 each, a premium 17 per cent over their intrinsic gold value.

Britain's Royal Mint also is readying for a bonanza. It has been turning out about 350,000 sovereigns a week that sell for around $66, representing a premium of 60 per cent on their gold content.

Europe's eight major bullion dealers are preparing to take their expertise to the new American market. Some have formed U.S. subsidiaries or teamed up with American stockbrokers.

Robert Guy, chief of the gold department at N. M. Rothschild and Sons, called the U.S. "a new market with new money and new ideas. We think it will bring a large boost in our business."

VW chief calls it quits

BONN (AP) — Rudolf Leiding, a former mechanic who led a technical revolution at Volkswagen, is quitting as chief manager of the automotive giant in the face of its first losing year since World War II.

Though poor health was given as the reason the 60-year-old Leiding decided Friday to step down, he is known to have grown weary of constant hassles within company management over declining sales and his desire to reshape the image of the Beetle maker. The board is to meet on Jan. 10 to discuss a successor.

A COMBINATION of lagging foreign and domestic sales, currency uncertainty, high oil prices and inflation have contributed to Volkswagen losses that could reach $163 million to $204 million in 1974. It had a profit last year of $84 million.

Temporary layoffs have become common, with some 30,000 off this week, and the remaining 86,000 to begin an eight-day lay-off Jan. 2.

Most of the world's bigger auto makers have similar problems. In Detroit, the United Auto Workers said U.S. auto industry layoffs are the worst since the 1930s and predicted harsher times ahead unless car makers get tax breaks. U.S. auto layoffs slated for the first quarter of next year approach 300,000, nearly 40 per cent of the hourly work force at the four major companies.

THE AUSTRALIAN government was reported considering assistance of up to $16.9 million to the General Motors subsidiary to avoid the dismissal of 15 to 20 per cent of the firm's Australian workers. The Melbourne Sun newspaper reported that the plan includes shorter work weeks.

There was speculation that Leiding's departure from Volkswagen might shelve indefinitely his pet project to build a plant in the United States, but a spokesman said it was still under consideration.

Volkswagen was already in a weakened financial position when Leiding took over as general-director three years ago from Kurt Lotz.

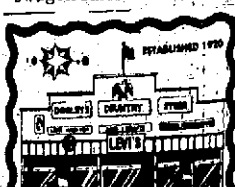

Leiding knew the business from the ground up, having started out as auto mechanic and then advancing to engineer under Volkswagen's master builder Heinz Nordhoff. In 1947, he had proudly stood at the end of the ramp as the 10,000th Beetle was rolled off the assembly line.

AFTER directing Volkswagen's Kassel plant, Leiding ran Volkswagen's Brazilian subsidiary, then advanced to manager of Volkswagen's West German subsidiary, Audi-Nsu, which was the first to introduce the revolutionary Wankel rotary-piston engine.

Once in charge, Leiding introduced a new generation of Volkswagens with water-cooled engines in front and championed the concept of interchangeable parts for various models. He trimmed the work force by 9,500 and offered bonuses to another 6,400 to quit.

The new models sold well in Germany, where sales have slipped a modest 4.2 per cent during this oil crisis year. But sales dropped 25 per cent in the United States, which normally accounts for one-third of total Volkswagen sales.

Antipollution controls working Nation's air clearing up, EPA reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency reported Friday that antipollution measures imposed during the past few years apparently have begun to clean up the nation's air.

But EPA Administrator Russell E. Train said he was concerned over indications that the easing of restrictions on high-sulfur fuels during last winter's Arab oil embargo quickly brought increases in sulfur dioxide pollution in some areas.

EPA specifically reported rising concentrations of sulfur dioxide at some monitoring stations in the New York metropolitan area last winter.

Train also said the EPA report, reviewing data covering the years 1969 through 1973 in all of the nation's 247 air quality regions, indicates that some regions may not meet the nationwide clean air standards due for achievement by mid-1975.

The standards were established by the Clean Air Act of 1970, setting limits on the airborne concentrations of suspended particulates (smoke and dust), sulfur dioxide, smog-producing "photochemical oxidants," carbon monoxide, and nitrogen dioxide.

The EPA report warned that its data contained many gaps and the 42 pages of detailed tabulation do not lend themselves to the description of local conditions.

But EPA said they show trends: general nationwide decreases of decreasing pollution.

—Suspended particulates, such as soot, smoke and dust, have been declining steadily throughout the nation, apparently because of the installation of control equipment and some shifting to cleaner fuels. But EPA's data indicated that roughly half the air quality regions were not meeting health-protecting standards in 1973, the latest available data.

—Sulfur dioxide levels declined nationwide, apparently because of switching to low-sulfur fuels. EPA said most of the monitoring stations that reported were meeting the federal air quality standards, but many areas remained unreported and still might be in violation.

—Smog-forming oxidants were decreasing in the Los Angeles and San Francisco areas, the only ones reporting substantial data. EPA credited the decreases to state and federal automobile emission controls. The agency expressed concern about the possibility of high oxidant levels elsewhere in both urban and rural areas.

—EPA said there was a general decline in carbon monoxide concentrations nationwide, most completely documented in New York, New Jersey, Washington State, and the Los Angeles and San Francisco areas, apparently due to auto emission controls. But many regions still were not meeting the national standard.

—In nitrogen dioxide, EPA said it was unable to report a trend because of earlier measurement problems, but the agency repeated its current belief that nitrogen dioxide is not as serious a pollution problem as previously thought.

It said most regions appeared to meet federal nitrogen oxide standards, but areas apparently exceeding the standard included Los Angeles, Chicago, Baltimore and, possibly, Denver, Salt Lake City and the New York-New Jersey-Connecticut region.

CHP sees 'busiest Yule ever'

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Californians won't be staying home for Christmas like they did last year, the state's highway patrol chief predicted Friday.

Commissioner Don Lanza said the state's motorists, unhampered this season by gasoline shortages, could drive as many as five billion miles during the 10-day holiday season ending Jan. 2.

"It could turn out to be the busiest 10 days in CHP history," Lanza said.

The patrol chief said many families may turn either holiday into a long weekend, with Christmas and New Year's falling on Wednesdays.

"And because gasoline is in good supply, most of them won't settle for staying at home," he said.

"They are going to hit the road and head for distant destinations."

THE National Safety Council estimates between 200 and 260 persons will lose their lives in Christmas' traffic accidents.

With the holiday falling on a Wednesday, the council considers it a one-day observance, actually 30 hours, from 6 p.m. local time Christmas eve to midnight Christmas Day.

Last year, 520 persons were killed in a four-day observance of Christmas.

The last time there was a one-day celebration of the holiday — in 1968 — there were 231 persons killed. The worst Christmas in terms of traffic deaths was in 1965 when 720 persons lost their lives.

LaForce minuses top pluses

WASHINGTON (AP) — The LaForce automobile engine produces only slightly better gasoline mileage than conventional engines when both are tuned without regard for performance and pollution emissions, the Environmental Protection Agency said Friday.

The slightly better mileage can easily be offset by installing a smaller conventional motor in the car, EPA said. It said the smaller conventional motor still would have acceleration performance equal to the LaForce engine, while it would produce even less emissions.

EPA's final test report on the new engine basically confirmed what the agency's auto emissions expert, Dr. Eric Stork, told a Senate subcommittee last week — that the LaForce engine was neither a new nor important development.

The LaForce engine is basically a standard six-cylinder American Motors Hornet engine with modified valve timing and a modified fuel injection system.

EPA said it compared the LaForce engine with two standard Hornet engines — one tuned to manufacturer's specifications to get good fuel economy while maintaining good performance and meeting EPA's emission standards, the other tuned to get the best possible gas mileage without regard to performance or pollution standards.

Airlines won't contest charges of ticket rebate

By ROBERT LINDSEY

NEW YORK — More than a dozen foreign and domestic airlines have agreed not to contest federal criminal charges for illegal ticket rebating, in a compromise negotiated to end a long-running federal grand jury investigation of a multi-million-dollar traffic in ticket kickbacks.

The case is the first in which airlines have been prosecuted criminally under a 38-year-old law prohibiting ticket rebates. The kickbacks are said to have been made to high-volume travel agents in exchange for diverting large numbers of passengers to the airlines.

As a corollary to the proposed settlement of the criminal charges, the airlines have agreed to negotiate a civil consent decree pledging not to make the rebates anymore. The list of airlines that are a party to the agreement includes Pan American World Airways, Trans World Airlines, British Airways, Air France, Lufthansa German Airways, and many other major transatlantic airlines.

The airline representatives also agreed Wednesday to attempt to negotiate a civil consent decree pledging not to make illegal rebates to travel agents anymore. But it is not directly part of the plan to settle the criminal charges.

According to industry sources, the rebates are a result of too much airline seating capacity on routes between this country and Europe. The widespread nature of the kickbacks was reported by the New

EXCLUSIVE
N.Y. TIMES SERVICE

York Times more than two years ago.

Industry sources say rebates have ranged from 5 to 50 per cent of the face-value of tickets, beyond the normal commission received by travel agents of 7 to 11 per cent. Some, but not all of the rebates have been passed on as discounts to passengers.

The U.S. attorney's office in Brooklyn and a special grand jury there began looking into the rebate schemes more than a year ago, after evidence of the practice surfaced during an investigation of organized crime involvement in the sale of stolen airline tickets. A separate grand jury devoted solely to the ticket rebating — which some airline executives assert have been practiced by virtually all transatlantic airlines — was impaneled several months ago.

The airline representatives also agreed Wednesday to attempt to negotiate a civil consent decree pledging not to make illegal rebates to travel agents anymore. But it is not directly part of the plan to settle the criminal charges.

5.6 per cent below a year earlier. That was the lowest level for real weekly wages since 1967, the department said. Real earnings measure the purchasing power of paychecks by subtracting pay increases that are eaten up by inflation.

Retail prices, led by increased costs of food and medical care, climbed another 1.1 per cent in the Los Angeles Metropolitan Area during November and boosted the Consumer Price Index to a record 148.7.

PRICES in Los Angeles and Orange counties during November were 11.3 per cent higher than they were a year ago, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics said.

Suzanne Sadowsky, chief of the bureau's Southern California office, said food prices rose an average of 1.6 per cent in November and were 12.5 per cent higher than a year ago.

Spendable earnings — or real earnings after taxes — were down 1.7 per cent during November and were 6.2 per cent below a year earlier.

The 12-month increase in the cost of living of 12.1 per cent was the biggest yearly jump in consumer prices since 12.6 per cent in 1947.

For the first 11 months of 1974, consumer prices have increased 11.4 per cent, compared with 8.8 per cent during all of 1973. The Consumer Price Index stood in November at 154.3 of the 1967 average of 100.

Food prices again added to the growing price burden of consumers, rising 1.4 per cent during the month and 11.9 per cent in the past year.

Leading the increases were fruits and vegetables which were up 3.4 per cent, cereals and bakery goods, up 2.8 per cent, and dairy products, up 0.8 per cent.

MEATS, poultry and fish dropped in price an average of 0.4 per cent and were 3.9 per cent lower than in November, 1973.

Medical costs rose an average of 1.4 per cent in November and were 11.8 per cent higher than one year ago.

Housing costs were up 0.9 per cent, transportation costs rose 0.8 per cent, women's and girl's clothing went up 0.9 per cent and men's and boy's clothing increased 0.3 per cent.

Prices for sugar, fresh vegetables, pork and poultry were major factors, especially sugar.

TIMM OUSTER

committee, last week called on Ford to remove Timm from the chairman's slot. And industry sources had been predicting Timm's chances of retaining the post were no more than 50-50.

Timm's troubles began when he accepted an expense-paid golf weekend in Bermuda as the guest of United Aircraft Corp. Chairman Harry J. Gray last June. Also on that trip were the executive officers of four airlines regulated by the CAB — Western, Pan American, Trans World Airlines and Braniff. The president of Boeing Commercial Airplane Co., E. H. Boullion, also was a participant in the trip, although it was uncertain who paid his way.

United Aircraft, although principally a manufacturer, owns 15 per cent of the stock in a San Francisco-Oakland helicopter service that is regulated by the CAB. It also is a respondent in a CAB investigation into who controls the airlines.

Timm also has been criticized for a European trip he took with Tom Taylor, a lobbyist for Trans World Airlines. Timm and his wife were visiting foreign airlines and taking part in meetings. Taylor and his wife were on vacation. The two couples flew together on TWA to Lisbon, Madrid and Rome and spent some of the time in Europe together, playing golf and sightseeing.

Timm denied charges that the trip constituted a conflict of interest but later reimbursed Gray for the cost of the trip. He also agreed to disqualify himself from cases involving United Aircraft but said he would not bow out of cases involving the four airlines whose heads went on the trip with him.

Timm, a native of Harrington, Wash., was a wheat farmer and cattleman before entering public life as a member of the Washington state legislature.

He was named as a CAB member by President Richard M. Nixon in 1971 and was named as chairman in 1973.

Woman admits shooting L.B. man in wallet

Tressie Lee Grigsby, 48, of Long Beach, Friday pleaded guilty in Superior Court to an assault charge stemming from the bloodless shooting of a boyfriend. He was shot in the wallet.

The woman entered the plea before Judge John A. Arguelles, who ordered her to return to court for a probation hearing and sentencing Jan. 17.

Miss Grigsby, of 1736 Lewis Ave., was arrested Nov. 22 after Robert Lee King, 43, told officers he had argued with a woman, then had to flee as she fired several shots at him with a handgun.

One of the shots lodged in the wallet that the sprinting man was carrying in his hip pocket, investigators said.

$20,000 fire

Long Beach firemen battle a blaze that broke out in the attic area of the A1A Television Sales and Service Shop at 3301 E. Anaheim St. at 3:20 p.m. Friday, causing about $20,000 damage. It took half an hour to get it under control, firemen said. The shop was unoccupied at the time. Firemen said the cause of the blaze was undetermined.

93RD CONGRESS ADJOURNS

DURING HOUSE DEBATE on the trade bill, supporters including Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., the bill's floor manager, said it is vitally needed to get negotiations moving to bolster economies throughout the world.

"This bill is the cornerstone in a program for world reconstruction that we're going to have to have in the period immediately ahead," Ullman said.

The bill authorizes President Ford and his negotiators to go into the first new round of international trade negotiations since 1967.

Despite Congress' overwhelming approval, there still was opposition, particularly in the House, from labor opponents and critics of the favorable U.S. tariffs and credit loans opening up trade with Communist countries.

GROSS AND REP. John H. Dent also contended the bill encourages U.S. companies to set up plants abroad because of cheaper labor and then pay higher unemployment benefits for Americans put out of work by the cheaper products that come back.

The bill permits Ford to grant the trade concessions up to 18 months if he certifies to Congress that the Soviets will move to permit more emigration during that time.

In the rush to adjourn, there were the following major actions:

—By 244 to 43, the House passed and sent to President Ford a congressional compromise bill designed to retain some poverty-fighting programs while setting up a way to phase out the Office of Economic Opportunity as an independent agency.

—The House and Senate completed action on a compromise social services bill. It would retain the existing annual ceiling on the federal share of funds to states for a wide range of programs such as child-care and feeding the indigent elderly.

—A last-minute attempt to salvage a proposal to lift government rice production restrictions was dropped.

—Legislation to speed up criminal trials passed the House and Senate and was sent to the White House. The legislation would provide for a trial within 100 days of a defendant's arrest.

—Congress passed and sent to the President a bill to sharpen the Treasury's bite on tardy taxpayers and to overhaul the tax status of political parties.

—The House sent to President Ford a bill to remove federal obstacles to state-run lotteries.

—By voice vote, the House sent to President Ford a compromise $1 billion health facilities and planning authorization bill revamping the Hill-Burton Act. It would switch the chief purpose of this well-known law from grants for building new hospitals to programs for modernizing hospitals and constructing out-patient facilities.

—By 205 to 56, the House passed and sent to the President a bill that would boost government price supports paid to dairy farmers from 80 to 85 per cent of parity.

Abuse-death of son admitted

By ROBERT GEIVET
Staff Writer

A young mother, charged with the murder of her infant son, sat sobbing in an Orange County Jail cell Friday after admitting in Santa Ana Superior Court that she abused the boy before he died.

Mrs. Jennifer Elizabeth Dabney, 20, wife of U.S. Marine Sgt. Dennis Eugene Dabney, 24, who earlier had admitted a misdemeanor child abuse count, will return to court Dec. 30 when her jury trial is resumed.

Her testimony, which came as a surprise because there had been reports that she would not be put on the witness stand, seemed to amount to a confession.

Mrs. Dabney told Judge Kenneth Lee and the jurors that she mistreated 8-month-old Robert Dabney because she was angry at her husband and because the child misbehaved.

She further testified that: —She put him face down in the bathtub in water but revived him after he stopped breathing.

—She slapped him when he would not eat, and he lost consciousness. She summoned her husband, who revived the child.

—She slapped the boy again the next day and he became unconscious. He was rushed to a hospital, where he died a few hours later.

Mrs. Dabney sobbed a story of also mistreating Robert's twin brother John, but most of her wrath was vented on infant Robert, she testified.

The young mother is charged with the boy's murder. Her husband had originally been accused of manslaughter and child abuse, but with his admission of child abuse, the manslaughter count was dropped, the district attorney's office said.

Sgt. Dabney is to be sentenced after the case against Mrs. Dabney is completed, officials said.

Dense fog closed airports, hampered driving and blanketed the Southland Friday night and was expected to remain throughout this morning—with a 20 per cent chance of showers predicted by this evening.

Forecasters said Southlanders can expect rain unless a cold front moving down from the Washington substantially dissipates.

Officials at Long Beach Airport said operations were suspended at 7 p.m. At 9 p.m. they reported visibility was restricted to 1/16 of a mile. Los Angeles International Airport was closed at about the same time.

The high Friday recorded at Long Beach Airport was 70. The mercury was expected to dip to a chilly 45 during the night.

Forecasters said today's high in Long Beach should be 62.

Fog and low clouds also were predicted inland to the coastal mountain slopes.

The forecast for Sunday includes a chance of showers in the coastal and mountain areas.

Irate Catalina residents stall development project

By LOU GODFREY
Staff Writer

Overwhelming opposition from property owners who live on the mainland has forced the Avalon City Council to postpone—and possibly abandon—a plan to raise funds by declaring the entire island community a redevelopment project.

In a 5½-hour public meeting Thursday the council, sitting as the Avalon Redevelopment Agency, tried to explain its proposed redevelopment plan to an angry and often hostile crowd that filled the 220-seat Avalon High School auditorium.

At the end, councilmen admitted the plan was not clear in its intention and probably had not been adequately communicated to the property owners. The hearing was continued to Feb. 3, a move which caused the loss of $35,000 to $40,000 in tax revenue.

The postponement was caused primarily by worried property owners on the mainland who were notified by special delivery letter of the plan and public hearing time. The letter made ominous mention of eminent domain and voluntary acquisition, leading recipients to believe their property might be taken away.

The delay was recommended by Eugene Jacobs, special counsel to the agency, after residents and absentee owners made numerous specific arguments against the plan.

Acknowledging the validity of some of the criticisms, Jacobs remarked, "Because of the comments made here, I would not recommend the council adopt this plan in its present form."

The delay would give the council time to reconsider the plan and

'Money harder to lay aside'

whether it should be submitted to the voters for approval, as many speakers requested. It also would give the councilmen time to draft more specific proposals in the plan.

Basically, the council had attempted to recapture county property taxes by forming a redevelopment agency covering about 800 acres or about 1.25 square miles.

Under California law blighted areas may be redeveloped with tax funds, called increments, that accrue as a result of the redevelopment.

For instance, there is a major condominium project under way at Avalon. The county taxes the vacant land at a rate of about 12 cents per $100 assessed valuation. The project will be reassessed when completed.

Under the proposed plan the city would get the tax funds that accrue on the difference between the original assessment and the new assessment.

Some 200 California cities—44 of them in Los Angeles County—have formed redevelopment agencies to recapture property taxes and use them for needed community improvements.

According to the estimate of one councilman, Avalon would recover some $800,000 in three years from projects either planned or already under way.

In an opening statement at the public hearing, City Manager Jack Osteen, who also is executive director of the redevelopment agency, said the city is pressed just to keep operations going.

"We are increasingly unable to lay aside money for known capital needs," he said. "We can, for the first time in history, utilize the Community Redevelopment Law and accomplish at least some of the things that need to be done in the city which would not otherwise be possible."

Project called 'a blank check'

Osteen said some projects being considered were harbor improvements, along with realigned moorings and upgraded loading and unloading facilities; a landing strip for short takeoff and landing aircraft; the sewage treatment plant, now being built; a street improvement program, storm drains and a bus or tram system.

He listed several other improvement projects and added, "this list is not exhaustive, not complete."

For many of mainland residents who own summer homes or other property on the island, and some islanders as well, Osteen's list was the first they had heard or seen that dealt with specific proposals.

Many of those present, already upset over the inconvenience and expense of a midweek overnight trip to the island, attacked the plan as vague and ill conceived. One called it "a blank check."

They criticized the handling of public notices of meetings dealing with the formation of the agency and shaping of the plan.

Some of the harshest comments were directed at parts of the plan that stripped the agency of its rights of eminent domain.

Many critics argued that while the agency was showing good faith by giving up its power of forced acquisition, it was hypocritical to do so because the same five men are city council members and the council has the right of eminent domain.

The argument was never satisfactorily concluded, but attorney Jacobs and the council members said they would do whatever was necessary to write into the plan guarantees that no one would have his property taken by eminent domain.

'...I'll look you in the eye...'

Most of the more than 200 persons present appeared to oppose the plan, and there were insinuations that behind-the-scenes powers—perhaps land developers—were backing the proposal.

One such suggestion drew a sharp rebuke from Mayor Norman Perluss, who challenged anyone in the audience who knew of wrongdoing by any councilman to step forward. (No one did.)

In contrast, some humorous relief was provided by Tom Bowers of Hemet. The elderly gentleman told the councilmen he had driven 150 miles and then taken a boat another 20 miles to address them.

"If I'm going to call you a stinker, I'm going to look you in the eye," he said to a hearty round of applause.

Less than a half dozen speakers favored the plan and only two favorable letters were read into the record. A major portion of the evening was devoted to the reading of about 40 letters opposing the plan.

In addition, two petitions containing 296 signatures were submitted in opposition.

A disappointed City Council yielded to pleas for delay and promised to try to come up with a clearer and acceptable plan. They indicated they would study the possibility of submitting the plan to a vote.

Action could have been postponed until July 1, the beginning of the next fiscal year. Had the plan been adopted before Dec. 31, the city would have received $35,000 to $40,000 in tax increments for the current fiscal year.

Surprisingly, the Catalina Island Co., which owns about 60 per cent of the land in the designated area, was not represented at the hearing.

teaching rights at the hospital should be extended, or that a new sale agreement be worked out, or that, in lieu of these alternatives, Orange County could terminate all affiliation with the hospital.

Post also objected to the agreement that the university could not cancel the takeover agreement until at least the year 2015. He cited a pact at Sacramento County Hospital which permits the university to abrogate its takeover there on a three-year notice, or as early as 1978.

In his rebuttal, Scott insisted that Post's analysis is faulty in

Denial of beachfront bid disputed by owners

By MARY NEISWENDER
Staff Writer

Attorneys for seven beachfront property owners who claim their property is being confiscated by the city without any compensation charged that City Atty. Leonard Putnam was "playing with words" when he told the city council that there were no plans to take the land.

"He has taken us to court and there's a judgment against us that I'm sitting here looking at right now that says the city wants a recreational easement over the property—including the homes—of these seven people," attorney Michael M. Berger, who represents the landowners, said Thursday.

The attorneys' statements came after Putnam told councilmen the city had no plans to take anyone's property without compensation, although a State Supreme Court decision apparently gives it such power.

"Mr. Putnam is trying to downplay what he's doing so that the city council doesn't get the full effect of the action they've taken on these people," Berger said.

"They can call it whatever they want, but the effect is taking their property without paying for it. The city's got a recreational easement over the entire property. What is it instead of 'taking' the property?"

Berger asked. "The city owns it... it's what they have been actively pushing in their law suit."

Putnam, contacted about his remarks to the council, said he would explain the entire situation to the city fathers next Tuesday. However, since the case is currently in litigation, the session would have to be closed to the public and the press.

Meanwhile, the seven property owners, headed by former schoolteacher Rod Mullinex, cited two letters written to them by Deputy City Atty. Clemons C. Turner and Putnam, disputing the city attorney's statements. He plans to send copies of them to the councilmen.

"If Mr. Putnam is telling the truth, then I don't think he knows what his office is doing," Mullinex said. "Basically Mr. Putnam is telling the council he is not doing this, yet we have documentation and spent five days in court which prove he is doing it."

Seven homeowners in the East Beach area have been taken to court by the city, and under a controversial Gion vs City of Santa Cruz decision, have obtained a recreational easement over the entire property—homes and all. Should the property owners not appeal the decision, the city would acquire all the land, without any compensation.

"They took us to court on the basis of the Gion decision—with the intention of taking our property without payment of any kind—and they won. Now, unless I settle with the city—that is give them 45 per cent of my property, free—they will take it all," Mullinex says.

However, the landowner's attorney claims he will file immediately for a new trial and, should that be denied, he will immediately appeal the case to a higher court.

Mullinex claims that on Sept. 18, 1973, Ronald Heath, who still lives at 5454 E. Ocean Blvd., gave the city 1,250 square feet of his property, without compensation of any kind, again refuting the city attorney's claim that they have never taken property without compensation.

"Mr. Heath's property was in trust and he was interested in having clear title, and the only way to get it was to give them what they wanted. He got nothing for it," Mullinex says.

In all of the letters and negotiations with the city, the retired City College professor says, nothing was ever mentioned about payment or compensation.

"I know they have never offered to buy my property, nor have they ever offered any money at any time during this settlement," Mullinex said. "But I really don't think the city council is aware of what the attorney is doing."

For council candidates

Suit to void residency rules

By KRIS SHERMAN
Staff Writer

A class action suit aimed at eliminating residency requirements for Long Beach City Council candidates was filed in the state District Court of Appeals Friday on behalf of a prospective council candidate.

Attorney Arthur J. Gottlieb, who filed the action in Los Angeles on behalf of Wayne C. Johnson and others, said a decision could be rendered in the case in time to affect the 1975 city elections.

A special election has been called Feb. 18 to fill the seat vacated last week by the resignation of two-term Seventh District Councilman Wayne Sharp. In addition, a regular councilmanic election is to be held this spring, with the primary scheduled March 18 and final election set for May 13.

Gottlieb said the suit was filed after City Clerk Elaine Hamilton informed him by letter that she would not give Johnson—who has announced his candidacy for the March 18 primary election in the Eighth Councilmanic District—the papers necessary to file as a candidate.

Mrs. Hamilton's statement came in response to a letter from Gottlieb, who told her his client would not meet the six-month residency requirement in the district by the opening of the Jan. 7-22 filing period.

Under the City Charter, council candidates must have lived in the city for one year and in the district for six months prior to the filing date.

Gottlieb said he hoped to obtain a court order to force the city to rescind its residency requirements.

He said similar cases have been successfully tried in other parts of the state, including the Northern California farming community of Chico, where a court struck down a one-year residency requirement.

Gottlieb said he hoped the court would order Mrs. Hamilton to accept Johnson's declaration of candidacy on Jan. 7.

"If she will not accept his papers, we have asked that the court order her to appear on Jan. 8 and show cause for not accepting them," Gottlieb said.

The attorney said he would at that time ask the court to issue the writ—within five days—forcing Mrs. Hamilton to accept Johnson's papers.

Gottlieb said the suit, which "has been in the works for quite some time," had nothing to do with the fact that some announced candidates for Sharp's vacated Seventh District seat may not meet the residency requirements.

City Atty. Leonard Putnam, meanwhile, said he was "rather glad that somebody has finally filed an action" relative to the residency requirement.

Post's objection to medical center deal blasted

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

Irritated by Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post's recommendation that the state reject an agreement for UC Irvine to buy the Orange County Medical Center from the county, county officials charged Friday that Post was dead wrong in his analysis.

R. A. "Bert" Scott, assistant county administrative officer and a member of the negotiating team for the UCI/OCMC transfer declared that Post's analysis is "clearly inaccurate and unsupported."

The legislative analyst told a joint committee on health sciences education in Sacramento Thursday that the $5.5 million agreement ($3.9 million of which is for equipment and supplies) to transfer the medical center to the university would bring with it untold costs, that the equipment is priced too high, that the operating contract is for too long a period of time, and that the state should not buy the medical center because renovation might cost $24.9 million.

He recommended that the county-university agreement under which UCI's medical school has agreement to purchase Orange County Medical Center, but the closing of UCI's medical school.

He said that the medical school's students could be transferred to other university teaching facilities, notably UC Davis, and that the money budgeted for a 200-bed campus hospital at UCI should be transferred to other medical schools.

Orange County sold its medical center to UCI on Oct. 1 for $5.5 million, subject to acceptance by the Legislature through budget allocations. County supervisors and university regents have already approved the pact.

ed market value arrived at by one of the foremost independent appraisal firms in the nation and accepted as proper by UCI negotiators.

Throughout the negotiations, the instruction of the board of supervisors was that any sale agreement had to be equitable, Scott insisted. The goal was "to properly place educational costs with the state, and indigent medical-care costs with the county." The UCI/OCMC agreement does just that," Scott declared.

In his recommendations to the joint committee, Post recommended not only the disapproval of the many respects, but Scott said that he did not have time to analyze every one of Post's statements.

Scott asked for an opportunity to testify before the joint committee by Jan. 15.

Scott said Post erred seriously in criticizing as unreasonable the $3.9 million sale price of equipment and supplies for the medical center's 550 beds. In fact, Scott noted, "much of this equipment is new, and practically all of it was purchased with the authorization of the university."

He said that the $3.9 million figure "is the depreciated apprais-

Sheriff plans to 'precollect' retirement pay

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Siskiyou County Sheriff A.B. Cottar says he plans to follow the lead of another California sheriff and "retire" for six days so he can collect $2,800 a month in pension and salary.

Cottar told the Board of Supervisors Thursday night that he would leave office Dec. 31 and then be sworn in Jan. 6 for a new term.

Monterey County Sheriff W.A. (Jack) Davenport announced two weeks ago that he planned to do the same thing.

The two lawmen plan to take advantage of a loophole in state public employees' retirement regulations that allows certain elected officials to "retire" at the end of one term and then be sworn in for another.

Both sheriffs say the action is legal and will save their counties the money now paid into their retirement plans.

By retiring now, Cottar will be eligible to collect about 58 per cent of his salary each month in pension payments. That comes to $1,037.

Future elected officials may not be able to take advantage of the same loophole, however. Assemblyman Tom Suitt, D-Palm Springs, introduced legislation Thursday he said would close it.

"I don't mind somebody cashing in all their accumulated pension benefits at a normally accepted retirement age," Suitt said. "But I certainly do question the morality."

GARDENING

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

One of the most beneficial and important garden clean-up jobs is to rake up faded camellia blossoms. It's best to pick off the faded blooms as they begin to brown. Such garden clean up helps plants avoid flower blight (sclerotinia camellia hara), a fungus disease. It affects the opening flower by causing brown or black spots that spread on the petals as it develops. Check with local nurseryman if plant is infested by this disease.

Camellia bud-drop is a perplexing problem with some gardeners because there may be a couple of plants from among the rest that also drop buds.

CAMELLIA authorities feel that some varieties have a tendency to drop their buds in certain localities due to petal formation in flowers, or the fact they bloom so late that the new growth forces the buds to fall.

Camellia buds that brown, dry and drop, are called blastings. Another bud problem occurs as buds begin to open... a moist rot sets in, the buds fall off due to ball-heading. Natural bud-drop may occur when the plant sets too many buds. Nature thins them.

The camellia hobbyists' consensus, with the exception of camellias that are known as bud-droppers, feel that faulty culture such as erratic watering, improper planting or soil, insufficient drainage or failure to use a balanced fertilizer improperly or none at all, are the main bud-drop causes.

Prolonged weather conditions such as a long dry season or a long wet one, and sudden changes of temperature, too, may be contributing factors.

Camellias — given ample drinks of water when thirsty, fed at least three times from spring through summer, showered during hot weather, and protected from possible pests if any found — are still one of the very best shrub investments, because they continue to provide succeeding crops of flowers for about three months.

Last week we promised we'd finish the second installment of a helpful bromeliads discussion written by Barbara Wood. She continues:

"Bromeliad hobbyists have numerous ways to force a mature plant into bloom. Your aechmea fasciata will respond if you dump the water from its cup and grow it very dry for several weeks. Others can be urged into bloom by removing the water, then place plant into a plastic bag with a fragrant ripe apple and seal the entire package up for 5 days. The ethylene gas produced by the apple will stimulate the plant into bloom.

"Once your bromeliad has bloomed it will begin to reproduce by sending out new 'pups' from the base of the plant. Herein will be the future blossoms. The 'mother' plant will never bloom again. It will eventually die.

"The aechmea is only one genus of the pineapple family. Other bromeliads include the neoregelias, vrieseas, billbergias, guzmanias, nidulariums, and the delightful tillandsias.

"Imagine nailing these plants to a tree, glue them on a stick of wood, or mount on fern or cedar bark with the root system hanging in the air!"

CAMELLIAS.....and bromeliads

"There's many more species, with startling colors and different shapes of bromeliads whose bloom and inflorescence compete with orchids, which are epiphytes too."

The Bromeliad Society

offers interesting monthly programs about these exotic plants. Send your name and address to the secretary for a notice of the next meeting. Mrs. Bette Anthony, 1348 Elsmere Drive, Carson, CA 90746.

Jobs for gardeners

Bearded iris plants whose rhizomes have pushed up an inch or so above the ground may be mulched with a half-inch of manure. Soak well, then in day or two apply the manure and water well. Later, in January or early February, they should be fed a balanced plant food. They will produce lovelier flowers next spring. The plants must be dug up, separated and new plants replanted in July or August.

Of the two types of per-simmons, hachiya, a fairly large size, and Fuyu which is smaller and shaped like a medium-size tomato, the Fuyu is a much better fruit bearer, because there's fewer fruit that drop during fruit formation growth.

CLUB NOTES

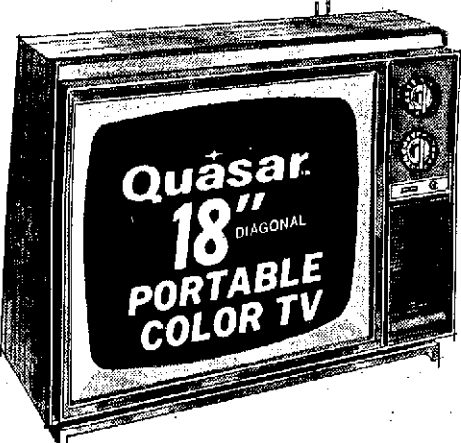

The Southern California Dahlia Society will hold its regular meeting tonight at 7:30, in the Community Room of the Glendale Federal Savings and Loan Building, 5535 E. Stearns, Long Beach. Chester Baston will show some slides — if the mail arrives in time. There will be a gift (wrapped) exchange and Christmas cookies. Visitors are welcome.

'Christmas Sunday'

On "Christmas Sunday," completing the Advent season's rich preparation for the Holy Night, area churches will respond to joyous music in colorful settings.

First Baptist, at Tenth and Pine, will repeat last year's "spectacular"—a production called "Go Tell It On the Mountain," presented tonight at 7:30, Sunday at 7 and 8:45 p.m. Free tickets are available at the church office while they last. Familiar and traditional music praising the birth of the Saviour will be enhanced by thousands of lights, bells, strings, harp and organ.

The Sanctuary Choir at First Nazarene, 2289 Clark Ave., along with a 25-piece orchestra, will present "A Christmas Festival," with five different scenes telling the historic story, at 6 p.m. Sunday.

"The Wonder of Christmas," by John Peterson, with a score described by director Dean Sunderland as "ranging from brilliant and dynamic to tender, for verses from the King James version of the Bible story of the Christ's birth," will be offered Sunday at 7:30 p.m. in North Long Beach United Methodist, 5600 Linden Ave.

Another favorite from the prolific Peterson, "Love Transcending," will be presented Sunday at 6 p.m. at the Salvation Army Temple, 455 E. Spring St., with the Temple Corps Songster Brigade. The Pantomime of the Christmas Story, written by Henry Flinner in coordination with the cantata, will be presented by the Corps' Young People.

Called a fresh new musical approach to the Christmas story, the cantata "Let the Whole World Know Jesus Christ Is Born!" will be presented Sunday, 7 p.m. by the combined choirs of North Long Beach Christian, 1115 E. Market St.

"The Trek to the Trees," with the trees decorated with white doves and clusters of red, gold and blue to match the Rose Window, will climax the 9 and 11 a.m. services at First Methodist, Fifth and Pacific, with worshippers bringing forth their gifts for Christ's mission and the church's social ministries. All four choirs will sing, with the stirring Hallelujah Chorus from Handel's Messiah concluding the services.

At University Lutheran, 1429 Clark Ave., the fourth Advent candle on the large Advent wreath will be lit at the 10 a.m. service, with appropriate music by the Cathedral and Childrens Choirs, and congregational carol singing.

Children will come front and center at the 10 a.m. worship in Immanuel Lutheran, 345 Carson St., with choral and orchestral numbers.

Bible Baptist, at 3935 E. 10th St., will present the cantata "God's Love Gift" Sunday at 7 p.m. Over in Garden Grove, Alamitos Friends Church, 12211 Magnolia Ave., will feature its 45-voice Christmas Choir and a 30-piece orchestra in a performance of "A Christmas Festival," by Jimmy Owens and Otis Skillings.

In Wilmington, First Baptist, 1360 Broad Ave., will offer a musical program "The Sounds of Christmas," followed by the film "The Other Wise-man," Sunday at 7 p.m.

In Los Alamitos, Bethlehem Lutheran, 11082 Wallingford Road, will hold Christmas Communion services at 9 and 11 a.m., and at 4 p.m. the Sunday School youngsters will put on a Christmas show.

Briefly...

Retiring pastor, religious 'movements,' Lampoon hit

By LES RODNEY
Religion Editor

Since yours truly is calling it quits at the end of this month—making this the next-to-the-last religion section I will edit—I naturally have some special empathy for a fellow retiree who is also counting down with mixed feelings to Dec. 31.

He is Rev. Edward H. Schroeder of First Lutheran, one of the ministerial friends I have been privileged to come to know here in ten years on this "beat." Pastor Schroeder has been at his "beat," which is service to the Lord, for 42 years, 18 of them here at First Church.

During his Long Beach tenure, the tastefully artistic sanctuary was conceived and built, and the sparkling new educational complex at Tenth and Linden became a reality. First Church, with a sensitive summer program for youngsters, also has played its Christian role in the community.

Pastor Schroeder was born in that fountainhead state for Lutheran pastors, Minnesota, up near Moorhead, almost 66 years ago. He was educated at Concordia College of St. Paul and Concordia Seminary at St. Louis, and his second pastorate was at Concordia Lutheran Church of Maplewood, a suburb of St. Louis, where he served much of the Concordia community for 16 years. Knowing the principals involved in the current doctrinal dispute, he naturally has a heavy heart about the division, though he is basically optimistic.

This optimistic quality comes through in his hearty, friendly manner, which is not a pastoral mask, but the real man. Pastor Schroeder is one of the ministers in this town who have forced me to revise upward my previously ignorant estimation of the caliber of most clergies.

With Helene, his wife of 39 years, he will be formally saluted at a banquet Jan. 11th to be held at Covenant Presbyterian.

As is perhaps unique to the ministry, which is something more than a job, retirement for Pastor Schroeder does not mean that the folks at First Lutheran say hail and farewell to him. He will happily fill in for a while as visitation minister, bringing cheer and counsel to people to whom he is far from a stranger.

THE CHURCH of God, headquartered in Anderson, Ind., has called upon its constituency to be "merciful and redemptive, rather than vindictive" toward those who refused military service during the Vietnam war.

SPEAKING TO the annual meeting of the National Council of Churches' Commission on Stewardship this month, historian Martin E. Marty predicted that the explosion of religious "movements" of the late 1960s had created.

Most of such groups, said the professor of church history of the University of Chicago's Divinity School, are either dying out, forming organized churches, or their adherents are joining established churches, which profit from their experiences.

Religious movements, he held, are "highly visible and extravagant but they cannot continue in that vein—they either become a cult, die out, or their members accommodate themselves to institutions in order to gain some relevance."

"It's easy to be a cult," he added, "to protect and surround yourself with impenetrable walls, and it's also very profitable for the cult for there's nothing else for members to give to. It's also easy to be merely worldly. But it's difficult to be indirectly worldly—to love the world, live in it, but yet not be of it. If there's a mandate for liberal churches in the latter 70s, I would hope this would be a part of it."

THE CATHOLIC League for Religious and Civil Rights has asked "fairminded citizens" to join in condemning the National Lampoon Magazine for its "incredibly scurrilous and vulgar attack on Protestant, Catholic and Jewish religious beliefs" in its December issue. (A quick look at the issue is enough to show that the League is not exaggerating.)

The statement says the League is contacting "the more than a score of reputable advertisers" whose ads appeared in the issue. "Certainly, we believe, no responsible concern would continue an advertising relationship which so grossly and offensively insults" the American religious community.

IN AN ARTICLE entitled "Asceticism for Our Time" in A.D. magazine, published jointly by the United Church of Christ and United Presbyterian Church, Roger Shinn, acting president of Union Theological Seminary, says Americans must face the necessity of sharing as a practical matter.

A major block to "real sharing," says Dr. Shinn, is that the concerned American cannot actually see the effects of his lifestyle on other, poorer societies. Last winter's fuel shortage was experienced here as "an annoyance," but higher prices for petroleum can mean life and death for many who must depend on petroleum-based fertilizers.

He speaks gloomily of the "moral quandary" of the affluent Christian: "There is no reason to think that the petroleum I am saving—by driving less—will get to Japan to make fertilizer to save lives in India. It will probably be used up by somebody like me, who can afford to buy both gasoline and food."

Nonetheless, Shinn calls upon individuals to undertake some symbolic acts of restraint.

"These acts will not transform the world," he says. "But they will raise our own consciousness and contribute to raising the social consciousness of the world's needs. Furthermore, if we contribute the cash savings from such acts to the direct relief of hunger or to political efforts to meet human needs, we make a real difference."

Well spoken, if I may sneak in an editorial thought. This specter of world hunger is a subject that good people can understandably get tired of hearing about. There have been so many calamities, and now things are pinching a bit right here in the U.S. of A. "Compassion fatigue" sets in. Bless the sometimes maligned church! Without conducting any public opinion polls to see if it's a popular position, good ol' church, following Scripture, says what has to be said, and plods ahead doing a little something about it, finally helping to stir jaded consciences in the secular world. People like Malcolm Boyd, proclaiming from a long-gone distance that the institutional church is irrelevant, don't know what they are talking about.

THE WEEKLY journal of the Church of Sweden, "Our Church," recently drew headlines when it distributed thousands of copies of a special issue on "Love" through Sweden's so-called porno clubs.

The issue explores aspects of divine and human love, sexuality, permissiveness, pornography and prostitution, offering a Christian perspective from a non-preachy context.

One club member offered to pay for the copies, saying "it's what we all need," and another offered to place a $2,500 advertisement in the church paper, but was turned down, reports the Lutheran News Service.

WHAT CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CAN DO FOR A FAMILY.

It can bring an understanding of God's closeness and care, helping each one in the family in everything he does.

It can develop a deep love for the Bible, and joyful obedience to God's law.

It can teach every member, and the family together, to heal problems in the way Jesus showed.

How can Christian Science do all this? Through Sunday School classes that strengthen children. Through Sunday services that inspire parents. Through Wednesday testimony meetings where personal accounts of healing are shared. Through Reading Rooms where truths are pondered in quiet.

Won't you invite Christian Science into your family's life?

POSITIVE THINKING

by Norman Vincent Peale

Memory of two Christmases

It was a Christmas Eve years ago. As twilight faded into night, gayly colored lights appeared inside and outside homes along the quiet Brooklyn street.

Emerging into the clear cold air of that star-studded night, after enjoying dinner with friends, I noticed something strange about a house across the street. Two wreaths were on the door, one a Christmas wreath, and alongside it, of all things, a funeral wreath. Startled, I asked who lived in that home. My friends only knew them as a nice family with three small children, one of whom had died that morning.

I walked up and down the street debating whether to intrude. After all, I was a pastor and this was the night of celebration of the birth of Christ Who loved everyone. Whether they were of my Protestant faith I did not know, but surely that was not important. A little child was dead and a family brokenhearted. It was a poignant human situation and love was needed. And after all it was Christmas Eve.

I RANG THE door bell and a courteous young man appeared. When I told him who I was he seemed genuinely pleased. We sat in the living room where two small children played beside a Christmas tree, its lights reflected in their bright and dancing eyes. "I was just about to read them the old poem 'Twas The Night Before Christmas,'" he explained. Then he added, "My wife is in the room upstairs with our other child. Would you please go up and talk to her? She needs a bit of help." Tears stood in his eyes.

Upstairs I found a beautiful young mother sitting by the still form of a little girl. I sat with her and let her talk. No bitterness, no doubts, no whys. She spoke only of love and gratitude to God for letting them have the child for three wonderful years. "She is now with Jesus," the mother concluded simply. And I thought of that other Baby born so long ago Who in manhood spoke of the heavenly mansions in the Father's house beyond this life.

The memory of those two unforgettable parents comes to mind every Christmas. Father downstairs making a happy Christmas for two excited little ones; mother upstairs keeping the long last watch. Forty years or more have gone by and there has never been a Christmas that a loving card has not come from that family with whom I shared a Christmas Eve long ago.

Christmas, you see, is not all lights and music and eating and celebrating. It is love and faith and human greatness—it is solidly based on a Child who came to wipe away human tears and make people strong and good.

Another Christmas Eve I remember was in Syracuse, N.Y. over 35 years ago. People of the church were distributing big, bulging love-motivated Christmas baskets to poor families in the neighborhood. All but one basket had been delivered and I offered to take the last one. It led me into a strange adventure.

The home proved to be little more than a shack at the rear of some rundown tenements. An obviously overworked young wife admitted me. I could see she had been scrubbing the family clothes in a steaming old-fashioned washtub. On a shabby couch sprawled the young husband, obviously deep in his cups. The wife followed my glance. "He is a wonderful man," she spoke defensively. "If it wasn't for that one weakness he would go places. And he will ... he will." Her voice ended in a choke.

ON THE WALL, surprisingly, were two excellent paintings which appeared quite out of place in the surroundings. They pictured a dignified and obviously outstanding couple. "They were his parents," she explained, "who were good New England people. He wouldn't part with those pictures even if we starved. I guess they represent his hold on things, on hope maybe."

I gave the basket to the young wife, wished her a Merry Christmas, and determined to help that family in a more creative way than just a Christmas basket. Next day, Christmas, I dropped in to see these people again and had a pleasant visit. The following Sunday they showed up at church and kept on coming every week. The young husband was unconsciously reaching for a better life and he found it. I stopped by the day they moved into a simple but nice home. I must admit I choked up a bit when I saw Fred carrying those two portraits into the new house.

It was July when they made this move, but it did not seem at all incongruous when Fred said happily, "Merry Christmas!" Why not? It was on Christmas that life began to be merry for this nice family.

'Reason for the Season' Winning Christmas essay

RHONDA
Winning Essay

A contest on "What Christmas means to a Christian," held between 30 journalism students at Brethren Christian High School in Paramount, was won by Rhonda Henderson, 17, with an essay entitled "Jesus Christ, the Reason for the Season."

Rhonda, daughter of Russel and Do-reen Henderson of Paramount, is a senior, was "Athlete of the Year" in 1973, is active in student government, and is rated A promising artist. Second and third place in the contest went to Becky Shelley and Ken Peskett.

By RHONDA HENDERSON

To many Christmas is a time to give gifts (usually expecting some in return), letters to Santa Claus, stockings hanging over the fireplace, the shopping rush, frosted Christmas trees, popcorn balls and eggnog.

The Christian, amid the crowded stores of bickering shoppers and a "Santa" in every bargain basement, sees a light—the star above the stable in Bethlehem, where God's Christmas gift to us was born, His only Son, Jesus Christ.

When Jesus Christ grew into a man, He suffered beatings, whippings, and a crown of thorns pressed tightly on His head. Then, barely alive, He had to carry his own means of death, a cross, to the place where He was to be killed. The soldiers hammered His hands and feet to the cross with spikes. Hanging on the cross, with thieves on either side of Him, He died a painful death.

He was born for only one reason—to die. In our place, He suffered the punishment we deserve because of all our sin, so that we could live forever in Heaven with Him.

The birth of Christ started the "Christmas" tradition. Like God gave this "special" gift to us, we give gifts to our family, friends and relatives. In today's society, this first Christmas is lost and forgotten behind the legend of Santa. To the outside world, Christ is not a part of Christmas, but to the Christian He's the only reason we celebrate it.

Brutal, sexist...or marvelous communal art

PRO FOOTBALL: theologians throw each other for a loss

As professional football goes into its playoff weekend, heading toward the Super Bowl, two Roman Catholic theologians express violently opposite opinions of the sport. The game mirrors "some of the worst characteristics of our culture," says Eugene C. Bianchi, a Catholic scholar and professor of religion at Emory University in Atlanta, Ga.

"It interlinks four qualities that drive the American violence machine: physical brutality, profit-maximizing commercialism, an authoritarian-military mentality and sexism."

Taking an opposing view, another Catholic theologian, Michael Novak, extolls the playoff games as "almost perfect enactments of comradeship, team unity, split-second execution and most intense physical confrontation."

"They are as lovely a communal art as humans have ever invented, precise, difficult to achieve, thrilling both to exercise and to observe," he says.

The two theologians, both generally regarded as progressive in their approach to philosophical issues, aired their feud over football in different religious publications.

Bianchi, a former priest and now a Ph.D. teaching at a Methodist university, led off the debate in the ecumenical weekly, the Christian Century, saying big-time football nurtures sexism, a "fundamental evil of our culture."

He pictures the game as a ritualized affair bolstering characteristics instilled in American males as marks of manhood — to be tough, competitive, to win, and to take a domineering, protective attitude toward women.

Calling these attitudes a "prime source of exaggerated aggression" in American personal lives and in the economic and political realms, he adds in regard to football:

"The weekend trek to the arena is ... but a pilgrimage to the national shrines where the virtues of toughness and insensitivity can be renewed and the role of women is clearly defined against the masculine criteria of value."

"In the football spectacle the important action is male-dominated; women can share in it only at a distance. They can shout and squeal from afar for the pleasure and service of the male whose

"bunnies" they are."

Challenging that assessment, Novak, a former philosophy professor and now a consultant to the Rockefeller Foundation, writes in the Catholic weekly, Commonweal, that football is among "the most humanizing institutions our society provides."

He says it is the "non-nathetics of the intellectual class" — the scientists, engineers and other experts — "who have produced most of the destructive instruments, strategies and remote control acts of violence of our time."

He notes that male aggression has been common in all sorts of cultures long before football was invented only 100 years ago, and asks: "Should Hitler have favored football rather than gymnastics?"

Unlike the devious, indirect aggressions besetting the present age, he says, football "is face-to-face confrontation, highly personal, open, direct ... In football, each player has responsibility for his every move ... Excellence cannot be bluffed."

"Those who oppose football exhibit fear and hatred of the human body ...," he adds. "Football is not the whole truth about life. But as a corrective to emotional falsity of bureaucracy and women-dominated institutions, to false ideals that deny the physicality of human nature, and to lassitude of body and will, football is a humble saving grace, a joy to millions."

From CBS

Bruce Broughton, director of music for CBS television, will be guest conductor Sunday 6 and 8 p.m. for the 35-piece festival orchestra and Sanctuary Choir at First Baptist Church of Lakewood, 5336 Arbor Road. Selections include the title song "The Glory of Christmas" by the church's music minister, John C. Hallett, with lyrics by Margaret King, recently published by Broadman Press.

Little girl and a new Yule mood

A little girl of 12 in North Dakota was watching a television news program when, as she relates, "they put on something about the starving people across the ocean."

"Right away, I knew what I was going to do," wrote Christine White of Rugby, N.D., and that was to send all her savings to the American Lutheran Church's world hunger appeal. "I certainly hope this will help those people."

The letter, along with her gift of $95.16, was received by the denomination's headquarters in Minneapolis.

Christmas generally is celebrated as a "time of fasting," an "annual festival of our consumer societies," says Dr. Philip A. Potter, general secretary of the World Council of Churches.

"But this Christmas will be more than ever a time of famine for vast millions of people ... This heightened awareness of the plight of our fellow human beings should force us to revise our false understanding of Christmas."

McCarthy wipes out GOP leaders

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy Friday stripped Republicans of Assembly regular chairmanships and ousted two opposition Democrats as committee leaders. The move put Democrats in complete control of committee chairmanships for the first time in a decade. McCarthy also reduced GOP committee membership. Earlier this month, all 25 Republican assemblymen pledged their support to a handful of dissident Democrats in an unsuccessful attempt to unseat McCarthy and replace him with Assemblyman Willie Brown Jr., D-San Francisco.

Two Brown supporters, Assemblyman Mike Cullen, D-Long Beach, and Wadie Deddeh, D-Chula Vista, were stripped of their chairmanships of Efficiency and Public Employees and Retirement, respectively.

The dissident Democrats expressed fear that McCarthy would "punish" them for attempting a coalition with the minority Republicans.

"I don't believe in punishment," McCarthy told UPI. "Let's just say there is going to be a shift in responsibilities. I believe it's just good to keep exposing people to different duties."

Brown, who also made an unsuccessful attempt for the speakership in June but was defeated by McCarthy, was appointed to the membership of three committees. He once was chairman of the powerful Ways and Means Committee.

In some surprise announcements, McCarthy, D-San Francisco, named John E. Thurman of Modesto to head the Agriculture Committee, Daniel Boatwright of Concord to lead the Revenue and Taxation Committee, and Leroy Greene of Sacramento to head the Education Committee.

Before the Nov. 5 election four Republicans held committee chairmanships. They were Assemblymen John Briggs, R-Fullerton, (Agriculture), Paul Priolo, R-Pacific Palisades, (Planning and Land Use), and Newton Russell, R-Tujunga. William Bagley, R-San Rafael unsuccessfully ran for state controller.

"This is not a vendetta," Jack Johnson, McCarthy's press aide, said of the loss of Republican chairmanships.

"When you have the smallest number of Republicans in the Assembly since 1882, you have a real tough time making one of them chairman."

McCarthy also reduced the number of standing committees from 25 to 20, which is the least number in this century.

"With members serving on an average 2.8 committees, the problem of conflicting committee hearings can be virtually eliminated," said McCarthy. "This should reduce the number of absences by members at committee sessions."

Assemblyman John Foran, D-San Francisco, a close friend of McCarthy, remained chairman of the powerful Ways and Means Committee.

All together seven new chairmen were named. Beside Greene, Boatwright and Thurman, other committee leadership assignments went to Bill Lockyer, D-San Leandro (Human Resources), Bob Wilson, D-San Diego, (Governmental Organization), Vincent Thomas, D-San Diego, (International Relations), and Julian Dixon, D-Los Angeles, (Public Employees in Retirement.)

State plans to recycle trash

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California announced a program Friday to require the recycling of five million tons of trash a year by 1980 into new products or the production of energy.

A key to the proposal by the Reagan administration's Solid Waste Management Board is construction by the state of a $25 million demonstration plant.

But board chairman David Baker of Orange County said he is not encouraged about the prospects of getting the money in the coming year's budget.

STILL, California joined New York and Oregon as the only states having mandatory statewide recycling programs, he said.

The plan approved by the seven-member board Friday afternoon carries out the mandate of a law passed by the Legislature in 1972 which created the board.

The plan also: —Establishes statewide standards for trash and garbage disposal sites to make them less unsightly, less smelly, and more efficient in use of the land.

—Proposed a $3.75 million fund for cleaning up litter along California highways. That project would be financed by a 25-cent surtax on auto registration.

—Allocated $405,000 for designing the demonstration plant and to study the possibly recycling of rice straw which now has to be burned.

"Our success will depend, in large measure, upon the continuing cooperation of the public and private sectors," he said. The state will have to rely on private industry to develop, on a large scale, the plants that would use the waste for recycling into new products or conversion of energy, he said.

The board has some enforcement powers, but not as much as it would like, he added.

The 1972 law also requires each of the state's 58 counties to present an acceptable trash disposal and recycling plan to the board by January 1976.

Californians currently throw away 20 million tons of household and commercial trash a year, Baker said.

The goal of the plan is to convert at least a fourth of that — primarily glass, metal and paper — by 1980 into recycled products and energy.

Glass can be reused for construction material, Baker said. Paper may be more valuable, and practical, for conversion into energy than for recycling as new paper products, he said.

Baker said he thinks California ultimately can re-use as much as 85 per cent of its waste material. While the cost will be high, he did not think it would be as much as $1.2 billion in capital investment forecast last week by former astronaut Scott Carpenter and Assemblyman Bill Greene, D-Los Angeles.

Baker's rough estimate was about three-fourths of that amount, or about $900 million.

State cuts retail milk prices 1 cent, lifts wholesale controls

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The state Food and Agriculture Department Friday reduced consumer milk prices by one cent per half gallon in all or parts of 11 counties including populous Los Angeles and San Diego.

The department, following through with previously disclosed plans, also announced virtual elimination of minimum wholesale price restrictions on milk statewide.

The retail price reduction will be effective Jan. 1 in Los Angeles, Ventura, Orange, San Bernardino, Riverside, San Diego, Sonoma, Marin and Napa counties and parts of Solano and Santa Barbara counties.

The department suspended wholesale price controls in the remaining areas of the state where it had not previously lifted the restrictions.

The new suspension areas included Los Angeles, Orange and San Diego counties.

Department Director C. B. Christensen has said the lifting of the law guaranteeing milk wholesalers a minimum price when selling their product to grocers could eventually force the department into suspending retail controls. If this happened, milk would virtually be placed on a free market with controls only at the dairy level.

January stock market hints on course for coming year

U.S. corporation could be self-defeating. Many companies have contracts with the Department of Defense, which cannot — the price of Arab owned stock most likely would plummet. And that prospect is unattractive to any investor.

Fonda to host 'All in the Family' special

By BOB MARTIN

TV-Radio Editor

On Jan. 12, 1971, the Bunkers made their bow on television.

Never before had there been a series quite like "All in the Family." Archie Bunker was a full-fledged bigot who called a spade a spade.

The comedy series stirred controversy from the start, and even today you can get arguments on whether the overall effect of the series on the American people has been for the good or for the bad.

But it quickly rose to the top of the TV popularity list, and it remains a Saturday night institution. "All in the Family," with its abrasive language and its focusing on controversial subjects, opened the door to greater freedom of expression on television.

vision, and has shown the way for many of the other programs on the air today.

Tonight, the series marks its 100th broadcast — and it takes note of the occasion with a special one-hour program titled "The Best of All in the Family." With Henry Fonda as host and with some 35 clips, the show looks back on memorable moments in the lives of Archie and Edith Bunker, daughter Gloria and son-in-law Mike Stivic.

The show airs from 8 to 9 on Channel 2, preempting "Paul Sand in Friends and Lovers."

THE ANGER felt by many football fans over the fact that the Rams' playoff game against the Washington Redskins in the Coliseum Sunday won't be shown on TV locally is a measure of how important television has become in our lives.

Their disappointment is understandable, and it is regrettable that some method hasn't been worked out to air the game, even though it wasn't a sellout 72 hours in advance, and still keep the club owners happy.

Maybe next year...

Football buffs will have to settle for two pro play-off games on the tube today and one on Sunday. St. Louis plays Minnesota at 10 a.m. today on Channel 2, and Miami clashes with Oakland at 1 p.m. on Channel 4. On Sunday, Buffalo takes on Pittsburgh at 10 a.m. on Channel 4.

WANT SOME Christmas music to help you get in the mood for the holidays? Lawrence Welk offers an hour of Yuletide tunes starting at 7 tonight on Channel 11.

And, on Sunday at 5 p.m., Channel 5 will present an hour-long musical special, "Home for Christmas With the King Family." The program, featuring three generations of Kings, is the family's first new Christmas special in six years.

"HOW DRINKING Affects Driving" will be rebroadcast Sunday from 3:30 to 4 p.m. on Channel 2's "Medix" series as a reminder to Christmas and New Year holiday motorists that alcohol and gasoline don't mix well.

"Medix," an award-winning series on medicine and health, has aired exclusively on Channel 2 the past three years, but will be syndicated nationally to more than 30 TV stations beginning in January. Mario Machado is the host.

KAPP GUNS DOWN NFL ON ROZELLE RULE, DRAFT

Combined news services
SAN FRANCISCO—Joe Kapp was known for his wobbly, dying-swan passes during his 12 years as a professional quarterback, but his latest pitch Friday was right on target.
In a sweeping decision that surely will be appealed, Federal District Judge William T. Sweigert ruled that the National Football League's contract and player-reserve system were illegal.
Ruling on the antitrust suit brought by the former Minnesota Vikings quarterback, Sweigert held that the league's so-called "Rozelle Rule" is "patently unreasonable and illegal."
Under the rule, the NFL can perpetually restrain a player's employment choice, even after he has otherwise become a free agent by fulfilling his contract with a league team.
NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle has established that the player's former team must be compensated by his new team, and if no agreement can be reached he determines the compensation.

Rozelle was en route to Oakland for today's playoff game. A league spokesman said there would be no comment until officials can study the decision.
Judge Sweigert also held that the NFL's draft rule is "patently unreasonable and illegal" insofar as it enables the league to exert control over a player's employment even though the drafting club fails to sign him.
Essentially, the decision means that unless the NFL can get an immediate stay of the judge's opinion, players such as Joe Namath and others who have played out their "options" will be unrestricted free agents and can join any other team in the league.
Additionally, the decision means that college stars, such as Anthony Davis of USC, are free to sign with any NFL team, unless the league modifies its draft rule before the Jan. 28 draft.
This could be done presumably along the lines of major league baseball, which has a six-month limitation on a team having sole rights to a player.

Sweigert also knocked down three other NFL rules insofar as they are used to interpret other league rules "restricting free employment choice." These are:
•The NFL's "one-man rule" policy under which Rozelle is given final say over disputes and grievances;
•The "tampering" rule under which fines and other penalties are imposed on rule violators;
•The standard player contract rule which requires all league players to sign a certain type of contract as a condition of eligibility to perform.
Sweigert ruled, however, that the NFL's "option" rule which provides that a league team has an option for a player's services for an additional one-year period at 90 per cent of the year's prior salary is not unreasonable on its face and that its reasonableness must be determined by a full trial, rather than by summary judgment as was the case with the rest of the issues.

The NFL's principal defense to the suit—that all its rules had been accepted by players such as Kapp under a collective bargaining contract—was rejected by Sweigert.
Kapp, who also sued the then Boston Patriots for breach of contract, will have to have a separate trial on that issue and the amount of damages he may have been caused as a result of any breach or "tortious inducement" of any breach by the league.
Damages awarded Kapp could reach $10 million, one of Kapp's lawyers said.
"We will ask the courts to set the case for trial and all the jury has to do is determine is how much damages to award Joe Kapp," said John Elliott Cook.
Implementation of Sweigert's decision may not come for years, if ever. Appeals of the decision could reach the Supreme Court, and that could take several years.
Also, the NFL could be successful in overturning Sweigert's decision in an appeal.

Fadin' 49ers nip Santa Clara; Mich. St. next

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer
SAN FRANCISCO—Long Beach State, trailing by four points and struggling at halftime, outscored Santa Clara 15-2 in the first 5:33 of the second half Friday night and went on to topple the Broncos, 68-54.
The triumph, Long Beach's fourth in six games this season, earned the 49ers a spot in tonight's title game of the University of San Francisco-hosted Cable Car Classic.
The 49ers will meet undefeated Michigan State at 9. The Spartans (5-0) got 26 points and 18 rebounds from Lindsay Hairston and 25 points from Terry Furlow to upset USF, 88-78, in Friday's second game.
Tonight's 49er game will be broadcast on KFOX (1280).
While Long Beach faded nervously at the end of each half, coach Dwight Jones was delighted with his club's performance immediately after intermission.
"That was the best 35 minutes of basketball we've had this season," said Jones. "Our zone was superb and our offense did a good job of picking up the tempo of the game in the second half."
Long Beach opened the contest in an impressive

WOODY ARRIVES—'FOOTBALL, NOT FUN'

The elderly gentleman in the shocking scarlet trousers and gray sports jacket smiled sweetly.
Had he been wearing a white beard and a red cap, he might have been mistaken for jolly ol' St. Nicholas.
Someone suggested Wayne Woodrow Hayes had become a nice guy.
"Isn't that a terrible slur?" he said.
There was a twinkle in the eye of the guy who once punched a sports writer after a Rose Bowl game, and another time shoved a camera into the face of a photographer who invaded a pre-game strategy session.
"I know me and I don't much care what other people think of me," said Hayes, whose Ohio State football team arrived Friday to begin workouts for its New Year's Day confrontation with USC in the Rose Bowl.

USC blitzes Vandy, 98-93

By RICK ARTHUR

With a clutch 12-0 scoring spree just when it counted late in the game, USC's basketball team sank the Commodores and gunned down the F Troop Friday night.
The undefeated Trojans (6-0) needed those dramatic dozen unanswered points to subdue a naughtily minded, bump-and-run squad from Vanderbilt—led by starters Jeff Fosnes, Butch Feher and Joe Ford—and gain a 98-93 win in the opening round of the fourth Trojan Classic.
A crowd of 4,942 at the L.A. Sports Arena viewed the topsy turvy contest in which Vanderbilt rallied from an initial 8-0 deficit for a 43-43 deadlock at halftime and ran to five-point advantages (54-49, 60-55) early in the second half.
Coach Bob Boyd's team, realizing that its undefeated and Trojan Classic streaks were threatened, trailing 76-73 with 6:15 to play, USC regrouped after a time out and reeled off five uncontested baskets and a pair of free throws for an 85-76 advantage that all but decided the outcome with 3:29 remaining.
Senior center Clint Chapman started the outburst with a rebound basket following a missed free throw by Casey Jones. Chapman was then credited with another field goal when his own

South Hills High of Covina won the CIF 4-A football championship from St. John Bosco, 20-12, Friday night at a fogged-covered Coliseum.
That was the only thing an estimated turnout of 15,000 was sure of at the end of the game.
Visibility was less than 20 yards throughout most of the second half, keeping spectators and even some of the players in doubt as to what was transpiring on the field.
The fog, the worst in 20 years in the Coliseum, began moving in at 8:30. By 9 o'clock, the only people who knew what was going on were sideline observers.
Even then it was impossible to see plays run to the opposite side of the field.
"It was bad," admitted SJB coach George Massick, "but no, I don't think the game should have been halted."
South Hills, leading 13-6 at halftime, clinched the victory when star quarterback Brian Bethke ran seven yards for a touch-

UCLA suffocates Memphis

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer
UCLA cranked up its full-court zone press Friday and, if the treatment Memphis State received is any indication, Digger Phelps had better bring the oxygen to his Notre Dame club tonight.
The previously undefeated Tigers were no match for the Bruins' suffocating defense and the result was a slightly surprising 113-94 UCLA victory.
Only UCLA's pathetic shooting kept Memphis in contention the first half. In one four-minute span the Bruins missed 12 successive shots at the basket.
That more than offset the Tigers' 17 first-half turnovers, nine of which came against the press. It was difficult to believe Wayne Yates' team trailed by only 11 points at intermission, 59-48.
The halftime respite didn't halt Memphis mis-cues—33 for the night—but it did solve the Bruins' inaccuracy. The Tigers stumbled along at a turnover-a-minute pace and the Bruins were in overdrive with a 221-point led midway through the second half.

They eclipsed the century mark with 4:23 remaining, their first 100-point-or-better output in regulation time in 27 games. They can't expect to duplicate that feat in tonight's nationally televised collision with Notre Dame (8:40 tipoff). That's provided the Irish arrive. Late reports Friday night had the Irish still grounded by a snowstorm in Chicago.
Senior forward Dave Meyers was slightly spectacular Friday night—if you discount many of his 13 field goals followed his own missed shots.
His career high 27 points and 8 rebounds not-

Saints scare Hares

Poly struggles to 56-49 win

By GREG VAUGHAN

An awakened Poly High basketball team out-raced and out-defended smaller St. Anthony in the second half Friday night to record its ninth victory without a loss, 56-49.

The win was hardly picturesque for the Jackrabbits, champions of preseason tournaments at Marina and Beverly Hills.

For two quarters of the game on the Jackrabbits' court, the Saints patiently worked for the open shot, and their patience paid off with a 25-24 halftime lead.

St. Anthony, passing the ball with authority, was hot from the outside and took a 9-4 edge. Baskets by John Nash and James Hughes enabled Poly to recover to lead 12-11 after one quarter.

Nash, who led all scorers with 21, managed only a single field goal in the second quarter as Poly fell behind, 23-18. Hughes hit two free throws to close the gap to 23-20, but St. Anthony's Terrance Carney answered with a driving lay-up through traffic. But again, the Jackrabbits closed the quarter fast on buckets by Leif Hertzog and Hughes.

"Obviously, we didn't come prepared to play," said Poly coach Ron Palmer in reference to his team's sluggish first-half play. "With a young team especially you need to get mentally prepared, whether it is a CIF championship game or a preseason game."

"In the second half we played with a little more intensity, and that was the difference."

Apparently so. The Jackrabbits scored on an outside jumper by Mike Wiley with 15 seconds gone in the third quarter to take a 26-25 lead, which they never relinquished.

Wiley, who entered the contest with a 21.5 average over eight games, was bothered by the flu and hit only 5 of 13 from the field. His teammates picked up the slack, shooting 52 per cent overall, and were 913 from the field in the third quarter when Poly outscored the Saints, 18-11.

St. Anthony closed to within six points midway through the fourth quarter but could not stop the red-hot Nash, who scored all four Jackrabbit field goals in the last period.

withstanding, Meyers may have become the leader the Bruins so desperately need.

Meyers thoroughly frustrated Memphis freshman sensation John Gunn, the former high school all-America who intentionally submarined Marques Johnson on the Bruins' cinch lay in late in the contest. Gunn managed only nine points.

Teammate Marion Hillard, the nation's leading rebounder, was another basket case. Nicknamed "Elevator," Marion was relegated to the basement by Ralph Drollinger, who's rapidly making people forget a fellow named Walton.

Hillard, averaging 17.6 caroms, was held to 6, the majority under his own basket, and 14 points—eight off Drollinger. Ralph contributed 16 points and eight boards, playing only 4½ minutes of the second half.

Memphis was without the services of high-scoring guard Dexter Reed (16.3), who suffered a severely bruised knee during the Tiger morning workout.

"We needed Dexter badly," said Yates. "The 17 turnovers in the first half killed us. Our reports said UCLA's press wasn't quite as good as it had been in the past, but they proved differently. We completely lost our poise."

John Wooden didn't linger on Memphis. "I don't think the Notre Dame game will be as high-scoring as tonight. They don't run or press as much."

The Tigers' 94 points were the sixth highest total against a Wooden-coached team and only one shy of the most by a Pauley opponent.

Carroll Rosenbloom won't be at the Rams' game against the Washington Redskins Sunday, but if they win you know who's going to get the game ball.

The Rams' owner is confined to Mt. Sinai Hospital. His doctors say he suffered only "a mild coronary" but they won't let him out until after the game.

"They don't want him to get worked up," explained son Steve, whose executive title is assistant to the president. "They know they couldn't keep him from going to the game, and if he went how would you keep him from getting excited?"

Rosenbloom, 68, was admitted to the hospital last Saturday after complaining of the flu and stomach distress.

"The trick was getting him in there," Steve said. "The coronary was so imperceptible that the doctors weren't certain immediately what had occurred. Then they said, 'Well, we want to run some tests.' That takes a couple of days, so he was trapped. He was a prisoner."

Rosenbloom also missed last week's game against Buffalo but is expected to be released Monday or Tuesday.

Steve explained that the coronary wasn't announced until Friday afternoon because "he thought he'd be in and out and didn't want anybody making a big fuss over it. He didn't want to get in the position of saying, 'Win this one for me.'"

Only the Rams' top executives were told, and coach Chuck Knox told the players Friday morning.

Captain Merlin Olsen said, "We're really sorry that the boss is down. Nothing we'd rather do than get a victory for him. I'm sure it would do his heart good."

John Williams, who also played for Rosenbloom in Baltimore, said, "Everybody has always deeply appreciated the interest he takes not only in his team but in each individual. It affects me in a very special way. He's the only employer I've ever had in football. We're very fortunate that it wasn't more serious."

The medical bulletin said that Rosenbloom "suffered a mild coronary with minimal damage and is recovering without complications."

Steve said, "He looks great. The rest has done him good."

OHIO STATE—

Hayes, who handled the commentary on the nationally televised USC-Notre Dame game on Nov. 30 when the Trojans scored 55 successive points, was asked if he had been frightened by what he had seen.

"I was enormously impressed, but not frightened," he said. "I think this is a better team than the one we beat (42-21) in the Rose Bowl last year."

"Anthony Davis is considerably better and the USC defense is more mature. From the Cal game on, this USC team has definitely been improving."

"I was impressed with some things Notre Dame did in the first half and the things USC did in the second half."

The Buckeyes will pose for pictures and meet the press, probably briefly, this afternoon at Citrus College, then will turn to hard work and occasional sightseeing ventures.

"I didn't come out here for fun," said Hayes. "I could have had more fun in the mountains. This game means a lot. The one coming up always is the most important."

Hayes indicated the practice schedule would be tailored to fit his desires, rather than those of the players.

"There are times when I want the players to dislike me very, very intensely," he said. "There also are times when I would like to have them carry me off the field."

He paused. "I'll talk our schedule over with our five captains."

Heisman Trophy winner Archie Griffin was asked if there would be pressure on him to duel with Davis, the No. 2 man in Heisman balloting.

Woody interrupted.

"You guys always are telling me how to do my job, so I'm going to tell you how to do yours," he said. "If you play up that angle, you'll be missing something.

"Arch is the best athlete on our squad and I guess Anthony Davis is your best," he said. "But we have a great line on both offense and defense."

Pointing to Griffin, the Ohio State coach said: "This young man was selected as the best football player in college, but without a good line he wouldn't be the best. He would be the first to tell you that."

Griffin didn't respond to the question.

Later, the Buckeye half-back interjected: "I'm a team player and what I'll try to do will be for the best of the team. There has been a statement made that Ohio State can win without me, and that's true."

Hayes sighed. "Gee, Arch, I sure hope we don't have to."

Woody hinted he had a secret.

"We'll show them (Trojans) a few new wrinkles," he said. "We always do. We try to take advantage of the other team's weakness. You must have a few things to throw them off their uniformity of thought."

What did Woody have in mind?

"A good general never gives away his strengths and weaknesses," Hayes replied.

Senior defensive tackle Pete Cusick, seated to Hayes' right, smiled.

Woody Hayes' invasion of the Southland was under way.

Tangerine, Early showdown for winningest teams Gate City bowls today

Combined news services

The NCAA's first sanctioned bowl game between black schools and the Tangerine Bowl keep college football's post-season humming along.

Mid-American Conference winner Miami of Ohio meets Georgia of the Southeastern Conference in the Tangerine Bowl at Orlando, Fla., tonight after the Norfolk State Spartans meet Tuskegee Institute in the first Gate City Bowl at Atlanta, Ga.

The oddsmakers had originally installed Georgia as a one-point favorite in its game, but that was before three starters were ruled academically ineligible.

Georgia has shown an explosive offense but a porous defense in running up an erratic 6-5 record.

Miami is unbeaten in 22 games with only a 7-7 tie with Purdue clouding this year's record.

"They'd stack up at the top in the SEC," Georgia coach Vince Dooley said of Miami. "They're ranked 12th in the nation and probably should have been ranked higher. I believe they can look anybody in the eye, even Ohio State."

Norfolk State, coming off its first winning football season since 1962, hopes to surprise Tuskegee.

"We surprised a lot of people in getting this far this year," said Norfolk State coach William (Dick) Price, who guided the Spartans to an 8-2 record and the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association title.

OFFICIAL: KILMER AND DUANE START

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Coach George Allen designated Billy Kilmer Friday as the starting quarterback for the Washington Redskins in their opening round playoff contest Sunday against the Rams at the Coliseum.

Allen also strongly indicated that Duane Thomas would open at running back in place of a limping Larry Brown.

After a morning workout and just before the team boarded a plane for the trip to the West Coast, Allen announced that "right now I favor starting Billy on the basis of his past performance against the Rams."

Sonny Jurgensen is the alternate.

Allen also noted that Brown, hobbled most of the year by injuries, was still unable to run full tilt during the closing practice and said, "As of now, I favor starting Duane."

there's a hex or a jinx. That just doesn't make sense. Now, if you beat a team like we've beaten the 49ers over the past five or six years, you can say something like that.

Q—Is this game of special importance in your comeback?

RENTZEL—I played in playoffs my first four years with the Cowboys, but this is very important for me because of being off last year. I've had to go through a lot of adjustments, like splitting time with Jack Snow and

Raiders battle rap, Dolphins at Oakland

OAKLAND (AP)—The Oakland Raiders have a lot going for them as the National Football League playoffs open, but mostly they want to beat the Miami Dolphins today to squelch what they consider a bad rap.

"Sure, it bothers me when people say we can't win the big games," Raiders coach John Madden says. "It's untrue. We've been in a lot of big ones, and we've won a lot of them."

The game in the Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum is the undisputed big one of the NFL weekend. The playoff formula created the immediate matchup of the teams with the best records in the league.

The Raiders, 12-2 this year, fell by a 27-10 score to the Dolphins in Miami last January when the teams met for the American Football Conference championship. Coach Don Shula's team went on to its second consecutive Super Bowl triumph.

"We depended too much on emotion before last year's game," Oakland defensive end Horace Jones said. "This year we're prepared for Miami in every way."

It's 'tropical 20s,' and Vikings love it

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP)—"Practically tropical," grumbled snow-loving Dave Osborn of the Minnesota Vikings when asked about the weather forecast for today's National Football Conference playoff game against the St. Louis Cardinals.

Osborn, a native of Cando, N.D., who will start in the Minnesota backfield, often has said that he plays his best when the weather is worst.

However, the Cardinals, making their first playoff appearance since 1948, don't share Osborn's opinion.

"We're wearing white jerseys," said Cardinal coach Don Coryell. "It could matter."

The National Weather Service forecasts temperatures in the low to mid-20s, with winds from 8 to 15 mph. Snow flurries are possible.

Minnesota is a seven-point favorite. Both clubs appear to be in reasonably good health.

The Vikings list defensive tackle Gary Larsen, suffering from a knee injury, as doubtful and reserve linebacker Matt Blair, sidelined with a strained ankle, as possible.

changing quarterbacks. But our passing game has come along in the past month or so and that's given me more confidence. They're throwing the ball to me more, so I know I'm contributing to the team.

Q—At what point do you feel you had recovered from the time you lost?

RENTZEL—About mid-season. I was in good shape, but my condition or speed wasn't a problem. The timing and the catching and the confidence didn't come until later.

Q—You keep mentioning confidence. Do receivers have a lot of ups and downs?

RENTZEL—You find yourself in a very delicate psychological situation, maybe more than any other position on the team except quarterback. You have to have total concentration and confidence in catching the ball. If you leave the huddle saying, "Geez, don't drop it," you're in real trouble. But the only way to reach that state of confidence is to be playing a lot and catching the ball.

Q—Has it been hard to concentrate with the appeal hanging over your head?

RENTZEL—No. Everybody has problems. You have to learn to totally concentrate on the task at hand.

Q—How have you managed to cope with it all?

RENTZEL—I've got a lot of things to be grateful for—a wonderful girl, I'm playing with a first-class team and organization, a lot of friends on the ball club I enjoy being around, I'm writing my book. There's no time to brood or be bitter. That only hurts yourself.

Q—As a writer who is aware of cliches, what about one of the greatest cliches of all—that "football is a microcosm of life"?

RENTZEL—I don't go along with that. It's a generalization and oversimplification. You're dealing with a certain special brand of people, and they're not like 47 people you'd pick at random. I have a much better quote from a man that I've researched in my characterizations for my books, Dr. Bruce Ogilvie. He said sports doesn't build character; it builds characters. One of the things I enjoy most about football is the people I've met. That's why I enjoy writing about them so much.

LANCE RENTZEL
Climax of comeback

Ivan's Easy Jet, Heza Charger top divisions of Alamitos Purse

The return of Ivan's Easy Jet and the debut of Heza Charger on the West Coast will be the main attractions in divisions of this afternoon's Idylwild Purse at Los Alamitos.

The third renewal of the $50,000 Champion of Champions will be Sunday afternoon's featured event. Ivan's Easy Jet, undefeated 2-year-old son of former world champion Easy Jet, heads the eight-horse second division of the Idylwild which includes The Lynx, El Jato, Laderago, Dickey's Fire Risk, Pokie Rex, The Ambassador and Go Anniversary.

Heza Charger, a fifth-place finisher in last September's $766,000 All-American Futurity, is the likely choice in the first division or fifth race which has also attracted Divine Right, Three Lit, Gigantus, Scoops Delight, Catchajet and Intensive Care.

Kaweah Bar and Shamrocket join seven other speedsters in today's co-featured eighth race.

Kaweah Bar, suffering through a Los Alamitos losing streak which has reached 24 races, makes his second start of the current meeting in the 400-yard event. He finished second in an earlier race.

Free Bars raced to narrow triumph over Neato Fa Neato in Friday's featured Fallbrook Purse, snapping a 10-race losing streak. He covered the 350 yards in 17.87.

Ridden by Danny Cardoza, Free Bars paid $19, $6.20 and $3.50 for his upset win. The triumph was the second of the afternoon for Cardoza, who also won the sixth aboard Lane's Red Hawk, and his ninth of the season.

Hank's Vanguard produced the fourth largest exacta payoff when he scored in Friday's eighth race. Ridden by Don Knight, Hank's Vanguard paid $89.40, $30 and $8.60 and combined with Third Image for a 5-10 exacta return of $1,115.50.

Jerry Nicodemus moved into the rider led when he booted in two winners. He has 12 winners after 12 days of the 55-date meeting which runs through Feb. 8.

KINGS, MONTREAL COLLIDE TONIGHT

The Kings will try to slay a four-year jinx tonight when they renew their chase with Montreal's division leaders at the Forum. A near-capacity crowd of 15,500 is expected for the 8 o'clock match.

Montreal, which is making its second visit this season, has never lost on the West Coast in 27 games during Scotty Bowman's four-year reign behind the bench. During that period the Canadiens have recorded 18 wins and nine ties against Vancouver, California and the Kings.

In the last few weeks the Kings and Canadiens have played leap-frog in the standings so the game is a must "four-pointer" for each club. Trailing by two points, the Kings need a win to pull even again. Montreal has played three more games than the Kings.

Tonight's match is the third of six meetings this season. Both earlier games resulted in ties, 4-4 and 3-3, in which Montreal came from behind.

Ken Dryden is expected in goal for the Canadiens while Rogie Vachon will start for the Kings.

Rube The Great aims for No. 5

NEW YORK (AP) — Rube The Great, winner of four stakes this year, was installed as the 5-2 favorite for today's $50,000-added Roamer Handicap at Aqueduct.

Harbor View Farm's Green Gambados, and Holding Pattern, owned by John Gerbas and Bob Schleicher, were rated at 3-1 in the field of eight 3-year-olds for the 1 3/4-mile race.

Holding Pattern, conqueror of Little Current, the Preakness and Belmont Stakes winner, in the Monmouth Invitational and Travers, was assigned high weight of 124 pounds. Don Brumfield has the mount.

Rube The Great and Green Gambados, who captured divisions of the Discovery in their last outings, each will carry 123 pounds. Braulio Baeza rides Rube The Great and Angel Cordero will be aboard Green Gambados.

Others scheduled to go are Jolly John, 118, 6-1; Sharp Gary, 115, 6-1; Ho-siery, 112, 8-1; Wickers, 109, 20-1, and Glossary, 110, 20-1. If all go, the race will be worth $56,000, with $33,600 going to the winner.

Meanwhile, Honky Star is entered in both the 1 1/4-mile Mademoiselle Stakes at Keystone and the six-furlong, $25,000-added Pine Valley Handicap at Garden State Park.

But indications are she will try winning her third successive stakes and fifth of the year against eight other 3-year-old fillies in the Mademoiselle Stakes.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Bob Cousy has only seen "about six or seven" soccer games in his lifetime but that didn't stop the American Soccer League from formally announcing him as its new commissioner.

Cousy, the longtime basketball star and former NBA coach, says his job will be to work in "public relations and to work to open the doors for a television contract and to attract franchises."

Why did he take the job?

"I guess I need a full-time job," he said.

FORMER heavyweight champion George Foreman figuratively discarded his boxing gloves for a sack Friday and joined Santa Claus in furthering the Christmas spirit.

Foreman disclosed that he is sending $1,000 to each of 13 cities to be distributed among the poor.

The move is intended to encourage others to make contributions to those in need, said Foreman's friend, Don King, in making the announcement.

TWO PRACTICE runs have established Marie Therese Nadig of Switzerland, the 1972 Olympic downhill champion, as the favorite for today's Women's World Cup downhill race in Saalbach, Austria.

Miss Nadig clocked 1:36.95 and 1:36.25 for her runs while Cindy Nelson of Duluth, Minn., was second with times of 1:37.22 and 1:36.92.

BILLIE JEAN KING thinks the conflict between amateurism and professionalism in sports, especially among scholarship athletes, denies equal opportunity for women — and men.

"There aren't equal opportunities in this country for athletes to really develop and that's discriminating against athletes," she said.

Billie Jean is especially peeved that college athletes on scholarship cannot receive money for their services.

Two groups reportedly seeking A's

NEW YORK (AP) — Rumors circulated throughout baseball Friday that the Oakland A's were about to be sold and moved to Seattle but owner Charles O. Finley of the world champions denied the reports emphatically.

The Associated Press learned that two groups have made bids for the A's. One includes former major league manager Herman Franks and the other is headed by Marjorie Everett, a Hollywood Park race track heiress whose bid to buy the San Diego Padres was rejected by the National League last year.

"I don't doubt at all that somebody is talking to Finley," said John Spellman, King County executive who has been in the middle of the battle to return major league baseball to Seattle. "But they are not anybody I am aware of from here. Nobody has been in touch with us recently about moving any team to Seattle. I know of no breakthrough in terms of the A's or anyone else," said Spellman.

In Oakland, Finley adamantly denied any intention of selling the A's. "They have not been sold," he said. "There are no negotiations to sell them. I don't intend to sell them."

Reports earlier in the week had the deal settled with the Franks group and said that it would have been completed before Christmas except for the historic decision which granted pitcher Catfish Hunter free agent status because of a breached contract.

Hail Kapp's victory Most significant development in sports: Garvey

The president of the National Football League Players Association said Friday the decision supporting former quarterback Joe Kapp's suit against the NFL's reserve clause "is certainly going to have a profound impact on (future) player-to-club relationships" but that it won't be "a damaging thing to the game of football."

In Washington, Ed Garvey, the executive director of the players' association, said: "We're absolutely delighted. It's the most significant development in the history of professional sports from the point of view of the athlete."

In referring to last summer's unsuccessful players' strike—in which the so-called "Rozelle Rule" and other aspects of the reserve clause were a major stumbling block—Bill Curry of the Rams said in a telephone interview that "after the events of our collective bargaining efforts, which are continuing, by the way, and the sort of things that were said and done last summer and spring, we're certainly very excited by the decision."

"AS TO WHAT the ramifications will be, it's really impossible to say just yet. I'm not hedging. I just haven't had the opportunity to read the decision and talk with our counsel."

"Naturally," the Rams' veteran center continued, "we're all excited, and will be following it with great interest to see how it affects the league in its negotiations and relations with the players."

"We don't know if every player is going to be a free agent, but I do know this—the whole emphasis in our negotiations was on achieving some degree of mobility—freedom, as we termed it—for players after they fulfill their contractual obligations with their clubs."

"I don't consider this to be a damaging thing to the game of football," Curry said. "I think the details can be worked out in a good-faith atmosphere."

"I don't think players are going to start jumping contracts. Certainly we're not gleefully sitting around here contemplating everybody running around to other clubs. We're just in favor of having a voice in our place of occupation. That's one of the reasons I got in (to the players' association) as heavily as I did."

GARVEY ADDED, "One of the reasons we went to camp without a contract was the Joe Kapp case and the John Mackey case, which goes to trial on Feb. 3. We felt that if either was successful, we would have achieved in court what we wanted in collective bargaining."

"Assuming it holds up, professional football players will be the first players to be free when their contracts come to an end," Garvey said. "We believe this will give the players their fair share of the revenues of pro football. But it will not have an effect on ticket prices."

"Players have been getting a smaller and smaller share of the revenues of pro football, and we think this will redress the balance. This is what we think Congress should have done when the two leagues merged."

"We think we'll sit down with the owners very soon."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Sunday

Your birthday today: The winter solstice arrives today as the Sun enters Capricorn at 9:57 a.m. PST. Both Sagittarians and Capricornians born today are headed for a very lively year of self-discovery, exciting personal adventure, try-outs that last just long enough to make something else possible. Today's Sagittarians are mainly interested in business, the Capricornians more inclined toward politics and community welfare.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Since the likely answer to most of your suggestions is no, concentrate on matters that are sound and require no planning. Be sensitive to needs of loved ones.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Staying put is difficult enough without making extra journeys and involving others who may not understand or agree with your approach. Let family questions lie.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Accept delays and postponements gracefully. The adventure will be more fruitful if you wait for the right conditions. Moderate habits are helpful.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): You are not the target of today's complaints and fault-finding. Postpone business negotiations; tend to your own welfare. Give loved ones a chance before you comment.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Overdoing comes too readily in nearly all activities; try to give just enough effort. It's better to leave something incomplete rather than to disturb anybody.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Put work aside this Sunday. Let others have their say and allow them to make mistakes and find their own corrections. It's not your job to change them.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Keep calm when you encounter competitive behavior. People are out of sorts from reasons beyond your understanding.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Even if you don't have to work, you have lots of odds and ends in chores and errands to tend to. Accept responsibility and carry on!

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Spending extra money achieves nothing in today's crosscurrent situation. Clarify information so all concerned get the true story.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): There's enough at home to keep you busy, so don't seek more to do outside. Make your comments brief and to the point. Concentrate on making the sensible changes needed.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be direct in your approach as you do your normal share in the community's expression of faith. You may have to substitute for someone who isn't there today.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Strive for simplicity and some solitude, while ignoring noisy, extravagant people around you. Enough people need attention to keep you busy with routines.

Yule concert serious, joyful

By DAVID LEVINSON

The program James Levine conducted with the Los Angeles Philharmonic and the Los Angeles Master Chorale Thursday was unrelievedly serious — and consistently joyful.

The composers were Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart. The works were the Christmas Oratorio, the Symphony of Psalms and the Mass in C-Minor. These works are easily available in recordings. They are not often presented in concert. And seldom are they presented in such loving performances.

They cast a light on each other. The Stravinsky sounds more traditional, somehow, in the company of Bach and Mozart. And Mozart's debt to Bach in his church music is delightfully apparent when they share a program.

LEVINE opened with excerpts from Bach's Christmas Oratorio. He sang along with the chorus and orchestra — still larger than the groups Bach had available — sang and played with great clarity of line, passion and swing. The chorus's German was intelligible. All its tones were in focus.

Soprano Kathleen Battle, mezzo-soprano Maria Ewing, tenor Paul Sperry and bass Michael Gallup handled the solo parts with ease and enthusiasm. The women were rather more effective than the men in the arias and duets; both have voices that are at once youthful and rich; and both were at ease with the trills and other ornamentation of Bach's vocal lines.

In one trio for two sopranos and tenor, concertmaster Sidney Harth played an obbligato that was a model of its kind. It wove in and out of the voices in a subtle and magical interlacing.

ONE MIGHT have wished for an evening devoted to the complete oratorio, but Levine chose well from the six cantatas that make it up — it was never sung in a single performance in Bach's day — and he did not stick only to the favorites.

Stravinsky's Symphony of Psalms is one of our century's towering masterpieces, a work that — despite Stravinsky's own words to the contrary — is one of the most powerfully emotional in all music. In Thursday's performance, the chorus was pale in the second movement and lacked crispness in the third. The brass also tended to lack snap. Levine's rock-solid tempos kept the work on course, however, and like any great music it does not depend on a flawless performance to live.

Mozart's C-minor Mass is not often heard, although it is heard oftener than Mozart's other church music. Its lack of popularity is probably traceable to the fact that it is unfinished. It is nevertheless music of unusual interest and, at times, of power. Levine, the chorus and the soloists — again, particularly the women — presented it with affection, discipline and skill.

THE WORK is stylistically curious, embodying as it does tributes to Bach and Handel through use of some of their rhythmic and harmonic styles together with some operatic sections that contrast sweetly and not ineffectively with the older styles that surround them.

Levine's greatest successes have been as an opera conductor, and this opera background was reflected in the dramatic approach he took to this religious music of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart. The drama was never merely a question of effects, however. It was a matter of realizing the internal drama of the works. Levine's success in doing that was the great triumph of the concert.

It's not 'Ho-ho-ho' anymore It's safer for Santa to 'Ha-ha-ha'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "Ho-ho-ho" is out this year at a Santa placement service that tries to help department store Clausen steer clear of such job perils as wet knees and pulled beards.

"We've found you can provoke incidents by frightening children with a sharp, quick sound like ho-ho-ho," said Barbara Holt, Santa coordinator for Western Temporary Services.

"Instead, we ask for a deep, resonant laugh," she said.

"Among other things, we suggest that our Santas alternate their knees from one child to another," Mrs. Holt said. "It saves a lot of wear and tear on the nerves and knees."

She also teaches her Santas, who earn up to $5 an hour, how to respond to such crises as the recent loud complaint from one child that she didn't like her mother's afternoon gentleman caller.

"Our people are instructed to say: 'Oh, that's not Santa's department,'" she said.

Leroy Rockefeller, one of Western's Santas at a major shopping center here, finds the job can be "frightening, emotionally upsetting and even terrifying."

"And no matter what the ordeal, Santa has to remain patient, gentle and merry."

Rockefeller, 34, who works as a computer operator during the off-season, said he is subject to wet laps, kicks in the shins and pulled beards.

"I've had my beard pulled any number of times," he said. "Why, just the other day a little girl got so enthralled with it that we both got wound up in all that hair."

Sometimes curious children inquire about Santa's bodily functions. He changes the subject.

And kids seem to be getting more sophisticated in their requests.

"I had one 8-year-old girl who told me she wanted a waterbed for her new apartment," said another department store Santa, who asked not to be identified. "I asked her if she was moving and she said: 'I want that waterbed for when I graduate college and move into my own apartment.' I wasn't myself the rest of the day after that."
